GEN. T. H. BLISS, DIPLOMAT AND SOLDIER, DEAD

Illness Claims War-Time Chief of Staff at Age of 76.

BURIAL IN ARLINGTON SET FOR WEDNESDAY

Pershing, Baker and Col. House Included in List of Pallbearers.

NAMED BY WILSON TO PEACE COMMISSION

Widow, Son and Daughter Are Among Survivors of Statesman-Warrior.

Gen. Tasker Howard Bliss, wartime chief of staff and one of the most distinguished soldier-statesmen in the history of the Nation, died at 2:36 o'clock yesterday morning at Walter Reed Hospital, after suffering for six months with an intestinal ailment.

Stricken seriously early last week, Gen. Bliss was pronounced Wednesday night beyond hope of recovery, and the end had been expected momentarily.

Preliminary arrangements have been made for funeral services to be held Wednesday morning at his home, 1842 Kalorama road, where the body will lie until that time. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Tributes of Sympathy.

His death at once brought tributes of sympathy from Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, and Gen. John J. Pershing, retired general of the Armies of the United States.

Many of his one-time associates in the public service of the Nation will serve as honorary pallbearers. They include Col. E. M. House, former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, Judge Richard Campbell, Gen. Pershing, Gen. Summerall, Admiral W. S. Benson, Admiral Hugh Rodman, Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, Maj. Gen. William Crozier, Brig. Gen. Stanley D. Embrick, Col. W. B. Wallace, Col. Arthur Poillon, Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, Col. J. M. Coward and H. R. Young.

His lengthy career, spanning almost a half century, was marked by a series of conspicuous achievements, crowned by service twice as chief of staff, membership on the supreme war council as representative of President Wilson, and service on the American Peace Commission, among other honors.

Native of Pennsylvania.

Almost 77 years old, Gen. Bliss had continued in service long after the statutory retirement date on his birthday, December 31, 1917. By order of President Wilson, he continued in active duty, and closed his career by serving as governor of the U. S. Soldiers' Home from 1920 until his actual retirement on May 1, 1927.

A native of Lewisburg, Pa., the son of George Ripley Bliss and Mary Raymond Bliss, he grew up in the atmosphere of the old Lewisburg Academy, now Bucknell University, where his father served as one of the original professors. There he laid the foundations to become a master of Latin and Greek and a scholar of many modern languages. He likewise was a deep student of history, political science and international affairs.

Attending the United States Military Academy, he was graduated in 1875 and attained a steady rise through the commissioned grades until 1915, when he began a two-year service as assistant chief of staff. He became acting chief of staff and finally chief of staff also in 1917, appointed to the temporary rank of general for duration of the war. In the same year he went to France with a special mission headed by Col. House.

Early in January, 1918, he was named permanent American military

GEN. TASKER H. BLISS.

WEEK-END TRAFFIC TAKES TWO LIVES

Capital Man Dies in Virginia Crash and Brother Is Badly Injured.

TAXICAB KILLS ONE

Accidents in Washington and near by cost the lives of two persons yesterday.

One man is dead and another is in critical condition in Emergency Hospital following an automobile accident early yesterday morning on the Columbia pike near Bingham road in Arlington County, Va.

John Acceto, 60 years old, of 429 Irving street northwest, was killed late yesterday when struck by a taxicab at Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Frank Hopkins, a driver for the Bell Taxicab Co., was released in custody of an attorney for the company. Coroner J. Ramsey Nevitt will hold an inquest at 11 o'clock today.

Mr. Acceto was crossing the street when struck by the taxicab. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital, where he died of a fractured skull.

The Arlington accident occurred, it was said, when two brothers, Glen Mangum, 22 years old and Newland Mangum, 21 years old, of 605 North Carolina avenue southeast, were returning from a dance at Balleys Crossroads, Va. The machine, driven by the older brother, was traveling at a high rate of speed, police say, and as it rounded a curve, ran from the highway and crashed into a telephone pole. The force of the impact threw the two men from the car. They were found lying near the wrecked machine by Beverly McPherson, of 1009 Eleventh street northwest, who reached the scene shortly after the accident occurred, and took them to the hospital.

Newland Mangum was pronounced dead upon arrival at Emergency Hospital. He suffered a fractured skull. His brother is in serious condition, suffering from a broken leg, a broken arm and a possible fracture of the skull.

Lycle Simmons, 22 years old, of Mitchellville, Md., was injured slightly early yesterday when the automobile he was driving crashed into a telephone pole near Upper Marlboro, Md. He was brought to Providence Hospital by the Princes Georges County Rescue Squad. He was treated for lacerations of the face.

Burglars Move Stock Of Store Away in Truck

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 9.—Burglars cleaned out the Rudisill Quality Shop, operated by Kenneth Rudisill, here early today, moving almost the entire stock in a truck after gaining entrance through a window, the glass of which they smashed.

The loot consisted of 83 suits, 10 topcoats, sweaters and most of the smaller pieces of merchandise. The loss was about $2,000.

LAMONT SEES JOB SOURCE IN TRAFFIC WORK

Suggests Aid Which Can Be Economically Applied Now.

SECRETARY CITES SAFETY MEASURES

Street Widening and Grade Separations Mentioned.

WOMEN OF NATION RESPOND TO CALL

Promises of Cooperation Are Received From Every Section of Country.

(Associated Press.)

Improvements to facilitate street and highway traffic were suggested yesterday by Secretary Lamont as a means of increasing employment.

The Secretary of Commerce advocated the changes also to promote safety and for economic reasons. He pointed out that traffic accidents cost approximately $1,000,000,000 a year while "the losses, delays and other inefficiency resulting from congestion and inadequacy of traffic facilities are estimated at more than $2,000,000,000 per annum."

The recommendations included improvement in traffic signs, elimination of obstructions to view, snow removal, protection of physical hazards, pedestrian safety islands and the clearing away of street obstructions.

Aid in Present Situation.

"The carrying out of street widenings, highway grade separations, railway-highway grade separations, pedestrian subways and other major improvements," he added, "afford an obvious means of aiding in the present situation where plans and arrangements are or can be advanced sufficiently to permit the work to be undertaken."

"Several cities," Mr. Lamont continued, "have followed the practice of building pedestrian subways near public schools which are on busy traffic routes. Scores of pedestrian tunnels of this kind have been built in Los Angeles and have resulted in eliminating accidents to school children. Tunnels of this character cost on the average less than $10,000 each and readily pay for themselves over a period of years in lowered police costs."

Mr. Lamont said many of the materials required for such construction can be obtained at more advantageous prices than usual and "now would seem to be a very favorable

Dogs Watch Body Of Blind Master

Faithful Canines Keep Vigil Over Man Quizzed in Brother's Death.

Two faithful dogs kept a death watch for their blind master, John Canadin, 44 years old, who was found dead in bed early yesterday at his home, 1027 South Capitol street, Joseph Canadin, of 331 M street southwest, his brother, found the body.

John Canadin was held for questioning last December in connection with the death of his brother, Bernard Canadin, 48 years old, who died of injuries received in a fall on the stairway of an alleged speak-easy. However, a coroner's certificate of accidental death was issued.

The body was found by Joseph Canadin when he stopped at his brother's home for his usual Sunday morning visit. Police said the death was from natural causes.

Actor, Denied Fame, Joins Stars in Death

Philadelphia, Nov. 5 (A.P.).—For 27 years Tommy West, a comedian, had dreamed of some day seeing his name coupled with the great stars. Before he turned on the gas and took his life in the kitchen of his home today he wrote his own "notice" for a theatrical magazine.

After carefully listing the parts he had portrayed and the circuits he had played, he wrote: "And if anybody wants to know where I am, just tell them that at last I'm with the big timers—Bert Williams, Jack Donahue, Caruso and the rest of the crowd."

West was 45 and unmarried. He had played in burlesque and vaudeville for 27 years.

ALEXANDRIA CHURCH HOST TO KLANSMEN

188 Attend Service to Prove Organization Not Dead, as Reported.

GIVE MONEY TO PASTOR

Aroused by a recent story in The Washington Post to the effect that the Ku Klux Klan had "died a natural death," last night delegations of klansmen and klanswomen from northern Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, gowned and hooded, but not masked, attended the service at the Trinity Methodist Church in Alexandria to hear a sermon by the Rev. Emmette R. Spencer, pastor, on "A Larger Meaning for Armistice Day," the minister taking as his text the words, "And They Shall Beat Their Swords Into Ploughshares and Their Spears Into Pruning Hooks."

There were, by actual count, 182 members of the klan dressed in the costume of the organization, and a band of 26 pieces, or 188. The klans represented were from Ballston, Potomac, Alexandria, Fairfax, Charlottesville, Occoquan and Fredericksburg, Va., and from Maryland and the District of Columbia. The klan played a prominent part in the services, there being an interlude by the brass quartet, of Ballston, which also played the offertory.

At the conclusion of the offertory Howard Edward Beatty, grand dragon of Province No. 1, of northern Virginia, of the Ku Klux Klan, as he introduced himself, arose and, grasping the hand of the pastor, announced that the klan organization had several reasons for coming to Alexandria and worshiping with the congregation of Trinity Church. They are always glad, he said, when an opportunity is offered for klansmen and klanswomen to meet in the House of God, to sing His praises and to study His word.

Another reason, he said, is because there have been various reports spread around that the klan organization has "died a natural death."

"I am sure," he continued, "that this splendid representation in your church tonight differs greatly with that statement. I have invited a newspaper reporter to be present here, and I hope he carries a correct statement of everything said and done here. The klan shall shall never pass out of existence until America has been made a clean and fit country for us all to live in."

The grand dragon then, in behalf of the organization, presented to the pastor a sum of money which, he said, was for the pastor to use as he saw fit, and he continued, "if at any time the klan organization can be of service to you and your splendid people in Alexandria, please do not fail to call, and I am glad and happy to say we will answer."

MAN TURNS GUN ON SELF AFTER SHOOTING WIFE

Mother of Three Wounded in Left Shoulder by Her Husband.

BARBER FIRES SHOT THROUGH OWN TEMPLE

Son Breaks Through Door and Assists Woman From Room.

BOTH MAY RECOVER FROM SERIOUS HURTS

Children Tell of Poverty and Suffering From Lack of Food.

Despondent over his inability to secure work, Joseph Masciana, 42-year-old barber living on K street northwest, near Twenty-fifth, yesterday shot his wife, Ouida, through the left shoulder and turned the gun on himself, inflicting a serious wound in his temple. Both have a chance to recover.

Assisted by her 12-year-old son, Andrew, who broke through the locked door of an upstairs bedroom as his father fired, Mrs. Masciana struggled to the street with blood streaming down her dress and on the clothing of the boy. Samuel Bond, of 1241 Jackson street northeast, put the woman in his car and took her to Emergency Hospital.

When Policemen L. E. Cline and P. S. O'Brien reached the scene a few moments later they found Masciana sitting on a bed, in a dazed condition. The gun was lying in the middle of the floor. He was taken to the Third Precinct station and later removed to Emergency Hospital.

Poverty and Suffering.

Meanwhile police were hearing a story of poverty and suffering from Frances and Peppino, ragged, undernourished children of the couple. The boy and girl, aged 10 and 8, respectively, told authorities that their father had not worked for more than two years.

Following his discharge from Gallinger Hospital a few months ago, Frances said, Masciana had repeatedly implored his wife to kill him. "He was worried over the rent coming due," the little girl explained, "and he didn't like to see mother and us hungry. Mother went up to his room to ask him if he wanted something to eat, and they closed the door and began to make a fuss. Andrew and us were playing marbles, and when they got awful noisy Andrew ran upstairs and pushed the door open. Just then daddy shot and mother came running out with blood all over her."

Had Mania for Guns.

As the child talked in a matter-of-fact tone, little Peppino sat reading the funny paper, incapable of appreciating a tragedy that might make him homeless.

Mrs. Masciana, police learned, provided her family with a precarious living by working as a chambermaid at premises near the Grafton Hotel. She was to have called on a priest yesterday afternoon in an effort to obtain money for the rent.

Masciana, who had a mania for guns, once had more than a dozen about the home, Frances said, but had sold all but the one used in the shooting—a new 32-caliber Colt. The pistol had been fired three times.

REPUBLICANS ACCEPT COOPERATION PLEDGE GIVEN BY DEMOCRATS

Daring Plane Landing Saves Golfers' Lives

With Engine Dead 2,000 Feet Above Bethesda Course, Army Pilot Skims Past Tee and Green, Winning Plaudits of Players.

Picking an emergency landing spot on a crowded golf course with a dead engine in your airplane is not the choicest of sports. Yet the ability of an Air Corps Reserve pilot to do that successfully undoubtedly saved the lives of himself, his passenger and several golfers yesterday noon.

Maceo Falco, Park Lane Apartments, an engineer on the Arlington Memorial Bridge and a lieutenant in the Army Air Corps Reserve, finding himself over the Kenwood Golf and Country Club, Bethesda, Md., with a dead engine, had no choice but to land on the club course. It was crowded with Sunday morning golfers who watched with some apprehension Falco's efforts to bring his disabled plane down.

Falco, with an enlisted man from Bolling Field as passenger and accompanied in another plane by B. H. Merchant, 1650 Howard street northwest, also an Air Corps Reserve pilot, found the motor of his training plane spitting and missing badly when about 2,000 feet over the course. Every effort to bring it back to normal failed, and he began descending in wide circles, looking for a landing place.

He had decided that the golf course presented the only possible area where he had a chance of saving himself, his passenger, and his ship, when the motor quit altogether. There was no alternative. He had to land.

Mr. Falco was coming in from the northwest. Ahead of him loomed the No. 3 tee, on which Jerome B. McKee, 3800 New Hampshire avenue northwest, and E. T. Burdette, 2515 Wisconsin avenue northwest, were playing. To the left was the crowded

"Full Faith and Credit" Is Accorded by Watson to Opposition.

SENATOR SAYS CRISIS DEMANDS SUCH STEP

Obstructionist Program Is Held Impossible if Pact Is Kept.

BOTH PARTIES STUDY ELECTION'S OUTCOME

Standings Are Unchanged, With G. O. P. Holding Barest Margins.

(Associated Press.)

Republicans yesterday accepted "with full faith and credit" the Democratic party leaders' assurance of cooperation for national welfare in the deadlocked Congress resulting from Tuesday's election.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, spoke for his party in a formal statement, issued through the Republican national committee, which concluded:

"We are faced with a national situation where the only patriotic solution lies in cooperative action, and I welcome it, and I am sure my colleagues will welcome it also."

This formal declaration from the party chieftain was regarded at the Capital as meaning there will be "no rocking of the boat" in the continued battle for political control of the next Congress, which might hinder America's recovery from the depression.

Both Recheck Results.

Meanwhile, both parties were rechecking the election results. Last night the standings were unchanged, with the Republicans having a majority of one for the next House and a plurality of one for the next Senate—results that might be reversed by recounts, deaths or resignations several times before the new Congress meets a year hence.

There were signs that some of the Democrats in Congress were not so well pleased by the assurance of the seven responsible leaders of their party, yet there was no open movement of revolt against it. The Democratic statement was signed by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, and Representative Garner, of Texas, Democratic leader in Congress, the last three Democratic presidential nominees and the executive heads of the national committee.

The statement by Senator Watson follows:

"We accept with full faith and credit the pronouncements of the seven Democratic leaders. We are very happy to know that their representation in Congress will cooperate with us in all legislative acts that tend to promote public well-being, and furthermore it is gratifying to know that they will not obstruct or embarrass the President in the conduct of the Government.

"I could, of course, indulge in criticism at the obvious political propaganda which accompanies their public assurance and I could recriminate as to the past, but this is not the spirit in which I desire to accept their offer of cooperation.

Should Steady Public Mind.

"The country is in a time of difficulty from world-wide causes, and cooperative action in the Congress is necessary. I believe their statement should steady the public mind. It was, no doubt, put forward in the hope that it would stabilize the public markets, which have been falling out of unnecessary alarm since the day of election, and it should carry conviction that this alarm is uncalled for, because it gives assurance that there will be no attempt on the part of the Democratic party to support disturbing legislation.

"It is obviously the duty of Republican members to cooperate. The

TRIO KILLED IN PLANE CRASH; FOURTH DYING

CRAFT DIVES 150 FEET

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., Nov. 9.—Three men were instantly killed in an airplane crash near Bowling Flying Field, 4 miles north of Staunton, this afternoon. The fourth occupant of the plane is not expected to live.

The dead are Jairus Collins, jr., 25, Bluefield, W. Va., lawyer, who was the pilot; Samuel Alexander Driver, 22, pilot, of Mount Sidney, and Greenlee P. Bosserman, 22, also of Mount Sidney.

The injured man is Paul Rimel, 24, of Roman.

Collins had taken off with his three passengers only a few minutes before crashing. Spectators said the plane, apparently failing to come out of a vertical left bank, dived from an altitude of about 150 feet, plowing deep furrows in the ground. The wreck-

Hurricane Injures Many in Honduras

Reports Declare 56,000 Banana Trees Were Blown Down.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Nov. 9 (A. P.).—A hurricane swept the Panama plantations in the Lacelba zone yesterday, injuring many persons and causing heavy property loss. No fatalities have been reported.

Reports said 56,000 banana trees were destroyed, with all their fruit, on the Corinto plantation owned by the Standard Fruit & Steamship Co. Another plantation producing 3,000 stems of bananas weekly also lost all its trees, reports said. Buildings were blown down and many persons were hurt by the crashing timbers. The extent of the loss has not been determined.

CANNON WEAKENED BY CONTINUED PAIN

CHURCH CHARGES NEAR

(Associated Press.)

The condition of Bishop James Cannon, jr., yesterday was reported by Dr. Lyman Sexton to be "weaker, due to continued pain from arthritis."

"There is no change in the infection in the joints," Dr. Sexton said. "His general condition is weaker and he appears more exhausted, due to the prolonged pain in the joints."

Dr. Sexton said there was no indication of improvement, and at the same time there was nothing to indicate that Bishop Cannon's condition would become more grave.

Bishop Cannon was removed to a hospital here recently shortly after his return from South America.

The Southern Methodist churchman went to Sibley Hospital on October 25 suffering from inflammatory arthritis which gradually spread to both arms and legs and above the right knee. He has been in severe pain from the disease.

Bishop Cannon is facing charges filed against him while in South America by four Southern Methodist ministers. While the charges have not been made public they are understood to include his activities against Alfred E. Smith in the 1928 presidential campaign and his stock market activities as well as new accusations.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, with whom the charges were filed, recently appointed a committee to investigate and determine whether a church trial is warranted.

Finding of Slain Fireman Foils Hospital Blast Plot

70 Nuns and Patients Threatened With Death When Slayer Drains Water From Furnace Boiler; Discharged Employe Sought.

Chicago, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Possible death or injury to 70 nuns and patients in the Little Company of Mary Hospital was narrowly averted today when an attendant came upon the body of John Weber, night watchman, slumped on the floor of the engine room near the dry boiler.

Weber had been shot to death and because the large boiler, apparently purposely drained of water, was on the verge of explosion, police said they believed a plot to blow up the hospital had been frustrated with little time to spare.

Police hold the theory that the fireman was shot as he came on duty at 2 a. m. and that the plotter then let the water from the boiler tanks, figuring the explosion would occur before Weber's relief appeared this morning.

Sergt. Thomas Buis, of the Evergreen Park Police, said he had started a search for a man with whom the slain fireman had quarreled, but refused to divulge his identity. The man, a former employe of the hospital, had threatened vengeance when he was discharged recently, police learned, and had told Mother Superior Dorothea he "would blow up the place."

The boiler room is 140 feet from the hospital and sisters' convent. There were 42 patients, 21 nuns and 7 nurses and internes on the premises.

Calvin Coolidge

Says:

The annual membership roll call of the American Red Cross about to begin, will be actively conducted in 16,000 communities. The present adult membership of 4,130,000 does not provide sufficient funds to meet the local, national and international demands that are made for relief.

There should be several more million members. People should join not only because the work needs financial support but because of the individual and public benefit that accrues from an extended membership in the greatest charity in the world. It has a charter from the Congress and the President of the United States is ex-officio its president. So many of its officers serve without compensation that its funds are almost entirely used to relieve temporary human suffering. Fire, flood, hurricane, earthquake or any other catastrophe calls it into immediate action anywhere on earth. We have no greater instrument of peace, friendship, and good will devoted to humanity without regard to race or creed. No more practical and far-reaching philanthropy was ever created. Nothing better represents the true spirit of the people. In the great response to the call for membership will be revealed the moral power of this country.

2 American Missionaries Slain in Wilds of Brazil

Attack on Station Laid to Hostile Savages; Infant Daughter of One Victim Also Loses Life When Indians Take to Warpath.

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Receipt of cablegrams stating that two American missionaries and the infant daughter of one had been killed in an attack on an isolated station near Juruena, in the wilds of Brazil, was announced tonight by Alfred H. Vroom, of Ridgewood, N. J., treasurer of the Inland South American Missionary Union.

The messages did not say who made the attack, but it was Mr. Vroom's belief, and that of other officials of the union, it was perpetrated by Indians. In that section of Brazil the Indians are naked savages, Mr. Vroom declared.

Last night Dr. Kenneth MacKenzie, president of the union, had announced that the deaths were due to an automobile accident. Today he explained that he personally had not seen the cablegrams, but from what others at the union offices had told him, he had gathered the mistaken impression there had been an automobile mishap.

Informed that relatives of the missionaries had received telegrams from the union office telling of an attack, he said he was now informed such was the case. He referred inquirers to Mr. Vroom who, he said, was better acquainted with the text of the cablegrams.

Mr. Vroom reported that the messages listed the dead as Arthur S.

two parties are practically equally divided in the Congress. It may be that the Republicans have a majority in the lower House. The very evenness of division between the two parties is without parallel in our history. It represents a legislative victory neither for the Democrats nor the Republicans. It may be well said on one side that the Democrats have made considerable legislative gains. It may be said on the other side that the number of gains of the opposing party are much less than in many midterm elections hitherto; that the Democrats have failed in their objective and that the Republicans have held astonishingly well in the face of the adverse factors temporarily in motion.

"But be this as it may, we are faced with a national situation where the only patriotic solution lies in cooperative action, and I welcome it and I am sure my colleagues will welcome it also."

Prohibition Foes Analyze Election

144 of 160 Indorsed Candidates Won, Says Constitutional Convention Head.

(Associated Press.)

Claims that 144 of its 160 indorse candidates for the Senate, the House and governorships were elected Tuesday were made yesterday by the National Constitutional Convention, which convenes here December 8.

Dr. F. W. uck, executive secretary of the convention, said it was very "hard to understand how the Anti-saloon League can be satisfied with results like this."

"The 144 candidates elected does not, by any means," he said, "represent the total number favoring modification in the House and Senate, as many were elected in districts where we did not indorse because both candidates were equally favorable to us."

The gain of the antiprohibitionists was greater, he said, than that of the Democrats. The purpose of the convention's meeting in December, Dr. Buck said, was to "find a sane and rational solution of the most dangerous social an deconomic proble mthis generation has been called upon to face—unenforceable prohibition."

Former Chicago Felon Is Slain Mysteriously

Chicago, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—John Ready, 30-year-old former convict only four months out of prison, was shot to death at dawn today by two assailants. He fell at Kenzie and Madison streets, on the West Side, with a bullet in his brain. Two men were seen running away, but those attracted by the sound of the single shot could give only a meager description of the killers.

Police, unable to advance a motive for the slaying, said Ready was not known as a member of any gang.

CURB'S UTILITY LIST CONTINUES TO DROP

Electric Bond and Share at 40 Recalls Year's Peak at 117⅞.

CITIES SERVICE SLUMPS

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Two months of declining prices sending a large group of curb stocks to record lows, have revived talk of a selling climax, although hope of more than a technical recovery is seldom expressed in speculative circles.

The market last week followed the lead of its old favorites, the utilities, which seemed to be affected to a considerable extent by the election results, and sold off sharply on increasing turnovers. Only a handful of stocks was able to withstand the pressure, and the issues in that group were inactives, mostly preferred shares. Electric Bond & Share dropped to around 40 compared with its year's high of 117⅞ and its 1929 peak of 189. The stock was freely supplied on all rallies. American Superpower was also weak and dipped below 11, while United Light & Power A penetrated the old resistance level and made a new low.

Standard Oil of Indiana was a feature of the petroleum shares. It offered stubborn resistance at 40, but cumulative pressure was sufficient to break it a point under that quotation. Vacuum firmed on the declaration of the 25-cent extra dividend and with Standard Oil of Kentucky enjoyed the distinction of holding above the year's low. The latter stock, however, succumbed in yesterday's trading and sagged to a new 1930 minimum.

Investment trusts were relatively little affected by the general decline. This group, it was pointed out, had been rather thoroughly liquidated and deflated during the early fall break, and has been dull in the last fortnight.

times to undertake a kind of community house cleaning with respect to traffic matters."

The program outlined by the Secretary followed the recommendations of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, of which he is chairman.

Women Respond to Appeal.

The Nation's women, in the words of one who appealed to them, are responding "marvelously" to the administration's call for countrywide cooperation against the ills of involuntary idleness.

Dr. Lillian Moller Gilbreth, of New Jersey, bright-haired mother of eleven children and grandmother of two won scientific praise for a study of "the best way to do work," was optimistic as she discussed the work of the President's emergency employment committee.

"Hundreds of thousands of women are represented," Dr. Gilbreth said, pointing to a stack of letters and telegrams that had brought to her desk assurance that their senders already had begun to cooperate or would do so.

Two weeks ago, when she took charge of the women's division of the committee, Dr. Gilbreth asked through the press that housewives join efforts against unemployment by surveying their surroundings and arranging for repairs and odd jobs. Then she dictated letters to 200 presidents of national women's clubs.

The responses piled before the director yesterday told of a variety of ready responses.

Birmingham Action Cited.

"In Birmingham, Ala., they have started a 'give-a-job' campaign," Dr. Gilberth said. "This, of course, is the best possible relief work, for it means stabilization of morale as well as aid to distress.

"From California comes a ord that 26,000 members of the Federation of Women's Clubs have been called upon to help," continued Dr. Gilbreth. "Their president suggests that if each of them gives a day's job to the unemployed, 26,000 days' work will be supplied."

Another Alabama community—Mobile—has a working relief machine manned by women. A group have constituted themselves an employment agency, and they have found work for 902 persons. In Providence, R. I., a women's organization has undertaken a similar project. The Daughters of the American Revolution, as a national society, has offered cooperation, as have the General Federation of Women's Clubs and others.

Getting Smoothly Organized.

Dr. Gilbreth is just now getting smoothly organized. She had to clear up an enormous corerspondence before she could go to work. She had to explain to scores who wrote asking for jobs that the committee is not an employment agency.

Responses had to be made also to modest philanthropists who wanted to work in the women's division, which is completely staffed by volunteers.

"Back your local organization"—this is the first admonition of the women's leader. Her next is, "Work with regional relief directors," and she urges also, "Keep up our standard of living in your own home."

The goal of Dr. Gilbert is to make her office a clearing house of advice and information, to stimulate local efforts and to give information on successful methods available where knowledge of them could be applied.

Plans Radio Campaign.

Soon Dr. Gilbreth will begin a radio campaign, urging women to "buy—but buy wisely." She will suggest that the women look first to their own homes, to maintain normal diets for their children, to seek relief if necessary, although they had never before done so. She will ask parent-teachers' organizations to insure correct lunches for school children.

"From coast to coast women are asking for directions," Dr. Gilbreth said. "We are furnishing them as rapidly as possible."

NOTABLES LAMENT GEN. BLISS' PASSING

Secretary Hurley Declares U. S. Has Lost Able Public Servant.

PERSHING VOICES PRAISE

Tribute to Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, who died here early yesterday, was paid by many notables in the military and civic life of the Nation.

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley issued an immediate message of condolence, declaring that "with the passing of Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, America loses one of the her most loyal and able public servants."

"In his long military career, he won by sheer ability the highest positions open to a professional soldier," he added. "At the same time, his qualities of mind and soul achieved for him international repute as a statesman and as a great American citizen. The conclusion of his majestically rounded life brings deep sorrow to the War Department."

Source of Deep Grief.

"The death of Gen. Tasker H. Bliss brings deep grief to the Army of the United States," asserted Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff. "His career greatly transcended the purely military sphere, but in a long, distinguished and useful life he gave of himself devotedly and effectively to the military service. We mourn the passing of an inspiring chief and of a noble soul. My personal sorrow is inexpressible."

Gen. John J. Pershing, retired general of the Armies of the United States, said, "The Army loses a great soldier and the country one of its distinguished citizens."

"I have known him ever since the days of the old Army, when he was an aid on the staff of Gen. Schofield," he continued. "He has served his country with marked distinction in many responsible positions. Gen. Bliss preceded me in command of the Moro Province, Philippine Islands, where he left the stamp of his character and his ability. When he commanded the Southern Department, I had an infantry brigade along the border.

Wartime Chief of Staff.

"He then was appointed assistant chief of staff, succeeding Maj. Gen. Scott as chief shortly after our entry into the World War. Upon his retirement at the end of 1917 he was appointed as our military representative on the supreme war council, where he became a very important participant in the activities of that body. He was held in high regard and his views were sought on every subject by his associates. No better selection could have been made for that important position.

"As a member of the Peace Commission, his intimate knowledge of the situation in Europe was of great value to President Wilson in the negotiations that followed the armistice.

"He lived his life in fulfillment of the motto of his alma mater—Duty, Honor, Country."

Baker Pays Tribute.

Cleveland, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Tribute to Gen. Tasker H. Bliss as a great leader in both war and peace was paid here today by Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in President Woodrow Wilson's Cabinet.

The death of Gen. Bliss marks the passing of "a great American and a great servant and citizen of the world," and closes a remarkable career, the former Secretary said.

"During the World War he was for a time chief of staff, then the American military representative on the Supreme War Council, where his service was preeminent. His sagacity, judgment and fairness gave him the position of the final umpire in many disputes," Mr. Baker declared.

"After the war Gen. Bliss was a member of the American delegation to the peace conference.

"Since the war Gen. Bliss has labored unceasingly in the cause of world peace. Perhaps no soldier anywhere has been so helpful an advocate of all the forward steps in the peace movement."

Bankhead Asserts He Was Misquoted

Denies He Ever Declared Against Democrats Organizing Congress.

Jasper, Ala., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Senator-elect John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, addressed a statement to the Associated Press today asking for correction of an interview with him carried last night.

He said:

"The statement from New Orleans that I said I would oppose organization of either the Senate or House by the Democrats, even if the official results of the national election should give the Democrats a majority, was not an accurate interpretation of the interview with me. I do not faver evading or refusing to accept any responsibility placed by the voters on the Democratic party. In view of the closeness of the vote in the Senate and the House, I expressed my personal satisfaction if it is finally ascertained that control of the Senate and the House did not pass to the Democrats under the circumstances.

"I am opposed to securing the organization of the Senate by any understanding with any others than Democrats on a legislative program. I favor the Democrats meeting the situation in accordance with the responsibility placed on the Democratic party by the electorate."

The Associated Press is glad to make the correction.

Bliss Walked 10 Miles For West Point Honor

(Associated Press.)

Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, who died yesterday after a distinguished career in the Army, walked 10 miles in his bare feet to obtain an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point.

And it was not necessary, for he had a new pair of shoes slung over his shoulder as he trudged through the dust to see his representative in Congress about going to West Point.

"I didn't wear the shoes," the general explained later, "because I knew they would get dusty. I wanted to save them until time for the conference, so I would look nice."

The youth, then about 17, got the appointment.

representative on the supreme war council and a second time as chief of staff. During his service on the supreme war council, until its dissolution in 1919, he occupied an exceedingly important position as representative of President Wilson in negotiating matters of major policy.

In November, 1918, he was appointed by President Wilson as a member of the American peace commission to serve with the President, Col. House, then Secretary of State Robert Lansing, and Henry White, of the State Department.

Thoroughly familiar with the horrors of war, Gen. Bliss shortly after returning from Europe with the peace commission began a quiet, unostentatious crusade for disarmament in the avowed belief that only in a reduction in armed strength could international peace be attained. Several years ago in a public utterance he declared that disarmament was not to be accomplished in a moment, but that it might require two or perhaps three generations to find a concerted sentiment among the belligerents of the World War to insure peace. At the time of the Briand-Kellogg pact he gave it his vigorous approval as an evidence that "the spirit of the world has changed."

During the early years of his service, he was an assistant professor in modern languages at West Point from 1878 to 1880, and a professor at the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., from 1885 to 1888 when he was named aid-de-camp to Lieut. Gen. John M. Schofield, then commanding general of the Army. In this capacity, he traveled extensively in Europe, gaining experience with the general staff systems of England, Germany and France which he turned to valuable account in assisting Secretary of War Elihu Root then in forming the first American general staff organization.

He was appointed special aid to the Secretary of War in 1895 and served until 1897 when he went to Madrid as military attache in the American Embassy there. Returning here at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, he was sent to Porto Rico and figured in all engagements of the campaign there. He was the officer who accompanied the flag of truce sent to the Spanish commander in preliminary peace negotiations.

With the war ended, he became Collector of Customs of Havana and the Island of Cuba and served until 1902, when he was appointed a brigadier general of the Regular Army. He served from 1903 to 1905 as the first president of the Army War College and as assistant chief of staff, aiding considerably during this period in shaping the general staff policy.

Received High Honors.

Service in 1905 as commanding officer of the Department of Luson in the Philippines and in 1906 as commanding officer of the Department of the Mindanao, coupled with service as civil governor of Moro Province, was followed by recall to Washington in 1909 again to become president of the Army War College and assistant chief of staff.

He went in 1910 to command the Department of California, and the following year commanded the Western Division, heading a brigade at the Mexican border during a part of this time. In 1911 he was transferred to the Department of the East, and in 1913 became commander of the Southern Division and the Cavalry Division. During this time he figured prominently on the Mexican border. In 1915 he returned to Washington again as assistant chief of staff.

Gen. Bliss, whose full rank was conferred on him October 6, 1917, was the recipient of numerous honors. He was brevetted by special act of Congress as a general for conspicuous and meritorious service. At the conclusion of the World War he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. In 1898 he had been brevetted a colonel for gallantry in action.

Those Who Survive.

Aside from receiving many honorary scholastic degrees, he received the Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George of Great Britain, the Grand Cordon of the Crown from Belgium, the Grand Cordon of the Order of the Rising Sun from Japan, the Légion of Honor from France, the Grand Cordon of the Golden Grain from China, the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus from Italy, the Italian War Cross and the Order of La Solaridad from Panama.

Gen. Bliss is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eleanora Emma Bliss; a son, Col. Edward Goring Bliss, of this city; a daughter, Mrs. Eleanora Frances Knopf, of New Haven, Conn.; a brother, Robert Bliss, of Harrisburg, Pa., former State librarian, and two sisters, Misses Harriett and Susan Bliss.

Blows Ruled Legal; Football Players Cleared

Glasgow, Nov. 9.—Whether football players who come to blows during a game commit a breach of the peace, was argued recently in police court. The woman magistrate, Mrs. Kate Beaton, decided that they do not.

George Mooney and Frank Rennie, members of the teams playing in the Scottish Consolation Cup tie last summer, were charged with breach of the peace for fighting during a game.

Mooney was running to the Ashfield goal when he was fouled by Rennie and brought down inside the penalty line. Mooney rose and struck Rennie and the fight was fierce until the two were arrested, charged with "committing a breach of the peace."

Capital's First Armistice Celebration Was Stirring

Twelfth Anniversary Marking End of World War Recalls Day When Wilson Read Peace Terms to Congress and Joy of Crowds Was Unsurpassed.

It has been twelve years since that eventful day in 1918 when word flashed around the universe that the World War had come to an end. Armistice day, they call it now, and it is a national holiday. Joy reigned supreme on November 11, 1918, and the city of Washington, center of the great war machine of the United States, was no exception to the rule.

But how many of the persons who participated in the wild demonstration which greeted the signing of the armistice still remember the details of that celebration? How many can remember what President Wilson said in Congress as he announced the terms which spelled defeat for the central powers?

Surrounded by members of the Supreme Court, senators, representatives and persons high in the official and civil life of the Nation, President Wilson, who had guided the Nation through the hectic period of conflict, slowly and calmly read the terms of the armistice. He was interrupted occasionally by cheers as the severe conditions of peace for Germany were unfolded. But the mightiest cheer of all was reserved for the remarks of the President as he concluded the reading of the terms. Then he said:

"The war thus comes to an end; for, having accepted these terms of armistice, it will be impossible for the German command to renew it.

"It is not now possible to guess the consequences of this great consummation. We know only that this tragical war, whose consuming flames swept from one nation to another until all the world was on fire, is at an end and that it was the privilege of our own people to enter it at its most critical juncture, in such fashion and in such force as to contribute, in a way of which we are all deeply proud, to the great result. We know, too, that the object of war is attained—the object upon which all free men had set their hearts—and attained with a sweeping completeness which even now we do not realize. Armed imperialism, such as the men conceived who were but yesterday the masters of Germany, is at an end, its illicit ambitions engulfed in black disaster."

Of the lighter side of the city's celebration of victory, there was much to be said. Washington put on an exhibition similar to that in every other large city. Many now residents of the Capital participated in the impromptu parades and meetings which followed the announcement that the war had ceased. Here's a portion of what The Washington Post had to say of that celebration the morning after it occurred.

"Peace and victory were greeted in Washington yesterday with the greatest demonstration the city has ever witnessed. Hour upon hour it was continued and in the evening when the climax was about reached, President Wilson, with Mrs. Wilson at his side, rode down and back the length of Pennsylvania avenue in an open automobile through the densely packed throng of widely enthusiastic people.

"So great was the din and the confusion that few recognized him on the way to the Peace Monument, but upon the return the great crowds realized that the President of the United States had joined them in their merry-making and the tumult rose to heights hitherto unreached. The executive car was able to move through the congested traffic only at a snail's pace despite the best efforts of the secret service outriders.

"Historic Pennsylvania avenue, rich in its memories of parades and inaugurals, will, probably never again see such riotous, good-natured enthusiasm, at least not until Pershing's heroes march down it in the last big review. From end to end it was a solid, creeping mass of pedestrians and automobiles, the latter moving no faster than those who walked. Light, color and sound were present in unprecedented volume.

"Flags were everywhere. The allies were not neglected. The tricolor of France probably predominated next to the Stars and Stripes of the United States. After dark motorists turned red and blue lights upon their radiator flags. The whole formed a striking picture.

"From the White House Ellipse leaped the flames of many bonfires, casting brilliant reflections against the sky. Overhead wheeled the lighted plane of an aviator. Army searchlights swung in great arcs and came to rest on the Monument, while above all the enthusiasm, noise, color and light below, the dome of the Capitol, stately and beautiful, shone forth in brilliant, sharp relief under the glare of many batteries of reflectors.

"Whistles were tied down, automobile horns were sounded endlessly, rising in a chorus that at times quite drowned the shouting and the tumult of the pedestrians; anvils, gas pipes, cow bells, tin pans, everything that could be pounded with noise resulting, was brought out. The roar as it came up from the street to the offices overhead was as continuous as the surf. That sheer fatigue did not call a halt at times would have justified an auditor in the assumption that the crowd had an organized system of relief.

"The city, for the most part, read the news of peace at the breakfast table. Government clerks went to work as usual, but by 10 o'clock department heads had been authorized to release all employes for the day. The Federal workers poured into the streets in thousands. They were joined virtually en masse by the rest of the population of the District, and the celebration began, not to wane until late at night."

It was a great day, but even with peace being celebrated there remained a grim reminder of the war—for just across the page from the story of the enormous celebration were four full columns of casualties overseas, and at the head of the list the names of two Washingtonians who died to bring about that peace.

Hoover Urges Support Of Red Cross Roll Call

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover yesterday called upon the Nation to support the annual American Red Cross roll call beginning Armistice Day and ending Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. Hoover, who also is president of the Red Cross, said: "I trust that the Red Cross membership drive this year may be more responsive than ever before. The Red Cross is our national insurance against the suffering of disaster in any part of our country. It is not charity in the normal sense of gift without obligation. It is supported by all of us, and the day may come when any of us may have claims upon its assistance or protection."

The Unordered Merchandise Scheme

The approaching Christmas season brings to many Washingtonians an avalanche of unordered merchandise, such as neckties, Christmas cards, handkerchiefs, etc. This merchandise is received in the mails, was never ordered—and, according to many of the people, receiving such goods is a nuisance.

You do not have to buy such merchandise, provided you do not use the merchandise. If stamps or arrangements for returning the merchandise are not included, you do not have to return it. The threatening letters that oftentimes follow the receipt of such merchandise demanding payment should be referred to the Better Business Bureau for attention.

Several years ago a bill was introduced in Congress to make the sending of unordered merchandise through the mails illegal. That bill was not passed and the practice is continuing unabated and, at this time, in increasing volume.

The appearance of this announcement in these columns is evidence that this newspaper supports and cooperates with the Better Business Bureau for your protection.

No Distress Signal

The Buy Now campaign should not be construed as an indication of poor conditions in Washington, but rather as a generous gesture of assistance to communities not so favorably situated . . . Unemployment in Washington is largely confined to persons from other centers who have come here in the hope of finding work. Fortunately for our regular population, but unfortunately for these people, our supply of labor and its demand remain at a fairly constant level—excepting for the requirement of government construction activities. We can offer little assistance in regard to employment within our own community—our greatest opportunity lies in maintaining our liberal buying habits that we may aid in rehabilitating the Nation's industrial centers.

Expedition Leaves To Study Reptiles

Baltimore Naturalists Man Especially Constructed Yawl Basilisk.

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The American Museum of Natural History announced that the yawl Basilisk left Baltimore late today on an 8,000-mile scientific expedition to study reptile and other life in the West Indies. It will be gone a year and a half.

The vessel is manned by Gilbert C. Klingel and W. Wallace Coleman, two Baltimore naturalists. It was built especially by Mr. Klingel to reach small islands, untouched by naturalists because of the difficulty of reaching them except in native boats without laboratory facilities.

Mr. Klingel has made a special study of reptile life and he expects to collect rare and unknown species. He also plans to study the organization of lizard colonies, concerning which little is known. The expedition is in the interests of the Museum of Natural History and the Natural History Society of Maryland.

Hitch-Hiker Killed By Hit-Run Driver

Another Youth Receives Hurts Which Are Expected to Prove Fatal.

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 9.—Joseph Gallegari, 25, of New York City, was killed instantly by a hit-and-run driver near Massaponax, 10 miles south of here, at 6:15 o'clock this evening. A companion, Ralph Mouser, of Belfonte, Ohio, received injuries which may prove fatal. A third youth, James Monroe, of Philadelphia, was injured.

The three youths, hitch hiking their way north, stepped from the higway to allow the speeding car to pass. The car, however, swerved from the roadside, striking Gallegari and Mouser. The former died instantly. Mouser is at the Mary Washington Hospital with two broken legs, a possible fracture of the skull and severe internal injuries. He is not expected to recover.

Spottsylvania authorities are attempting to locate a Chevrolet roadster with its right front headlight missing.

ARLINGTON COUNTY PLANS TO CLEAN UP

Mass Meeting Will Arrange Program in Anticipation of Washington Fete.

BACKED BY GARDEN CLUB

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Plans have been completed for the mass meeting at the Washington-Lee High School Wednesday night at 8 o'clock under auspices of the Arlington County Garden Club, to organize a movement for cleaning up and beautifying Arlington County in preparation for the bicentennial George Washington celebration, according to the committee.

Dr. William R. Martin, president of Arlington Hall College for Girls, and Prof. J. O. Malott, expert on commercial education in the National Bureau of Education, are to be the speakers. There will be selections by the High School Glee Club.

The meeting has been arranged by a committee headed by the president of the garden club, O. J. Shuster, and including C. H. Deaton, vice president; Mrs. E. V. Conberg, recording secretary; Mrs. P. C. Dyer, corresponding secretary, and George P. Taylor, treasurer.

Mr. Shuster declares that at this meeting the club will stress the need for the county to cooperate with the City of Washington and the Nation in having the National Capital and the adjoining suburbs present as attractive and beautiful an appearance as possible during the celebration.

Mrs. Thomas Fife Snyder, of 74 Melwood avenue, Cherrydale, writer of short stories, will be hostess to the members and guests of the Arlington County Creative Art Club at its meeting tonight.

Mrs. Frances S. Larkin, lyric poet, mother of Mrs. Snyder and member of the League of American Pen Women, will recite several of her poems. Miss Virginia Bestor, of Lee Heights, will entertain with piano selections.

The Sunday school and church workers of Arlington and Fairfax Counties have started a unique movement in religious education by providing high grade week day schools of religion in ten communities.

More than four years ago, the leaders in the respective county councils of religious education began to study this movement. A great many conferences were held and last year, in cooperation with the Rev. Minor C. Miller, general secretary of the Virginia Council of Religious Education, a plan was worked out for launching the movement. Both county school boards approved the plan and the work, during the first year, was considered a great success.

A year ago, a joint board on religious education from the two counties employed a highly trained director of religious education in Miss Isabel Latimer. Last June Miss Latimer resigned to accept appointment in the foreign mission field. This delayed plans for starting the work this year. The joint board, however, now has employed Miss Ethel Morrison, of Jackson, Miss., as director of religious education for the two counties. Miss Morrison has been on the ground several weeks and the schools will start today.

Children are enrolled only at the written request of their parents. No child is taught religion who does not file this written application. The work is managed and supervised by the cooperating churches, through the County Council of Religious Education. The public school authorities have recognized its value and have been glad to make the children available by releasing them from classes during the regular school day.

Meeting Saturday night, the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department nominated the following officers for the coming year: For president, Julian E. Tapp; vice president, John A. Dawkins; secretary-treasurer, Elmer J. Blackmer; assistant secretary-treasurer, Norman T. Meyers; chief, A. C. Scheffel; deputy chief, Edward E. Goldblatt; Thomas Snoots and Charles L. Snoots; fire marshal, John W. Travis, William McAfee, G. C. Flemming and Norman T. Meyers; captain, Charles L. Snoots, Carl Rosenfel and William W. Snoots; lieutenant, Carl Scheffel, Paul Scheffel, Edward Goldblatt, James Decatur and G. C. Flemming; members of the board of directors, V. Eichardt, John R. Mossburg, Herbert L. Wilson, George Cook, John E. Bamforth and Joseph Doyle, jr. The election will take place December 3 in the Firemen's Hall.

A special drill by Battery B, Fifteenth Field Artillery, Fort Myer, under command of Capt. Robert D. Maraise, will be a feature of the Armistice Day program at the Washington-Lee High School today at 11:30 a. m. Music will be furnished by the High School Cadet Band.

This program will be given under auspices of Arlington Post No. 139, American Legion, and its auxiliary.

The November meeting of the Woman's Club of Ashton Heights will be held in the clubhouse tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Plans for perfecting the Parent-Teacher organization at the Washington-Lee High School will be made in the school auditorium Thursday night. Officers then will be elected.

DANVILLE STRIKERS SEEK TRUCE AGAIN

Labor Leaders Will Confer Here Today on Plans for Support.

COURT RULING WATCHED

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Nov. 9.—With the Danville textile strike, involving some 4,000 workers, entering its seventh week, officials of the United Textile Workers have reiterated their willingness to meet H. R. Fitzgerald, president of the Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills, in a conference looking to a coordination of local differences.

At the same time further steps are being taken to consolidate support from sympathetic union bodies, and Francis Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, is to confer tomorrow in Washington with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on the local strike situation.

According to Miss Matilda Lindsay, who organized the women workers here; Dr. John Dewey, for many years head of the department of philosophy of Columbia University, is a member of the emergency committee on strike relief, which is raising money for the Danville strike from groups outside the labor movement. It is also learned that special efforts are being made to interest influential religious bodies in the South and North in the Danville situation.

Public interest in the strike veered today to the Corporation Court, where tomorrow a number of appeal cases involving unlawful assembly and intimidation of nonunion workers are scheduled for hearings. In every instance in which a striker was convicted and fined in police court on such charges, appeals were taken. How these cases will fare before jurors tomorrow is viewed as having an important bearing on the future conduct of the strike. The week-end was quiet and no disorders were reported today.

Mississippi Diggers Given Wage Increase

McComb, Miss., Nov. 9.—The strike of the excavating crew employed to dig the ditches for the distribution system of the Citizens Natural Gas Co. here is believed to be at an end, following a conference in which the matter was arbitrated by representatives of the strikers and the contractors through the officers and directors of the McComb Chamber of Commerce.

At this meeting it was agreed to pay the workers 25 cents an hour, which is 5 cents an hour less than the amount asked for, according to Dean C. Holmes, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

New Marriage Law Urged by Lindsey

Would Have Human Relations Institute Supplant Courts.

Hollywood, Nov. 9.—Advocating an "institution of human relationships" to supplant divorce courts, and the enactment of laws providing for sex education of parents and children, Ben B. Lindsey, founder and for 28 years judge of the juvenile and family court of Denver, in an address at St. Alban's Pro-Cathedral of Hollywood, freely discussed companionate marriage and kindred proposed reforms, of which he is an outstanding protagonist.

Discussing proposed laws, which he said he intends to ask the California Legislature to pass "in the interest of morality and justice," Lindsey laid stress upon "the need of a bill for an act to repeal all present restrictions against physicians imparting to contraceptive information to their patients and to others who seek to limit their families in this way."

Lindsey also advocated a law "to create a special commission empowered to handle and dispose of all divorce separation, annulment, nonsupport and desertion cases, including cases of illegitimacy."

PHILADELPHIA PARTY VISITS ALEXANDRIA

1,100 Shriners and Legion Members Make Annual Pilgrimage.

TOUR HISTORIC SCENES

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
207 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 533.

Forty buses carrying 1,100 members of Lulu Temple, Mystic Shrine; members of the American Legion, and their families, arrived in Alexandria at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Philadelphia, and were met by a committee of 30 members of Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, headed by Commander Sidney Weil; members of the American Legion Auxiliary executive committee, and wives of the officers of the legion post, headed by Mrs. F. Clinton Knight, president of the auxiliary.

The visitors were first escorted to Gadsby's Tavern, the home of the legion post, and from there members of the post guided parties to the Masonic Temple on Cameron street, over which George Washington presided as first worshipful master, and where Tiler George W. Zachary delivered a talk on the Washington and other relics in the lodgeroom; to Christ Episcopal Church, where Washington worshiped, and where his pew is still intact; to the old Carlyle House, where Washington was tendered and accepted his commission as a major on the staff of Gen. Braddock, and to the old Presbyterian Meeting House, in the yard of which are buried many heroes of the American Revolution.

The caravan then proceeded to the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Temple, on Shooters Hill, where J. Claude Keiper, of Washington, secretary of the George Washington Memorial Association delivered a talk descriptive of the temple, its conception, construction and purpose. During the proceedings in the temple, the chimes, presented to the temple by President Louis A. Watres, of the Memorial Association, were played by Miss Cranford, daughter of the contractor for the temple. Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, past grand master of Masons in Virginia, came to Alexandria to assist in welcoming the visitors.

The occasion for the visit of the Shriners and Legionnaires was the annual Armistice Day pilgrimage of the two bodies. Last year approximately 500 were in the party, but that number was more than doubled yesterday.

After the exercises in the Masonic Temple, the party proceeded to the Alexandria Naval Torpedo Station, where an early dinner was served, the visitors having as their guests the committees of the legion post and auxiliary who acted as their guides. The Philadelphians brought with them everything necessary for preparing and serving a dinner, and had leased the Torpedo Station for the day; the dinner being served in the huge cafe of that building.

Eustace S. Raines, aged 70 years, died Saturday night in the Alexandria Hospital, and the funeral will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Susie Roache, 104 south Columbus street, conducted by the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery. The deceased was a native of Holiday, Va., and is survived by his wife and several children.

Samuel Palmer, aged 60 years, died Saturday in a Washington Hospital and the body was brought to the Cunningham Funeral Home, and will be sent to Remington, Va., for burial.

A membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held tonight at 8 o'clock, when Ralph Bradford, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will be principal speaker. A talk will also be given by Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the local body.

M. J. O'Leary, representative of the Supreme Council, Knights of Columbus, will visit Fitzgerald Council Wednesday night, and talk on the business administration of the council and also report on the activities of the Supreme Council.

The regular meeting of Robert E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, will be held at 8 o'clock tonight, in Lee Camp Hall.

2 U. S. MISSIONARIES ARE SLAIN IN BRAZIL

Tylee, formerly of Worcester, Mass.; his 2-year-old daughter and Miss Ethel Kratz, aged about 26, a registered nurse from Chicago. Mrs. Tylee was injured, but is recovering, while a Mr McDowell, of Ireland, another missionary at the little station, apparently also escaped with his life, for it was he who sent one of the messages.

The station at which the massacre occurred is a three-week journey by bullock cart from the nearest civilization. Jiruena is a settlement of stretches through the wilderness. Its six houses near a telegraph line which inhabitants are a handful of Portuguese-speaking Brazilians.

The Indians in the neighborhood are unclothed primitive types who hunt with poisoned arrows and sleep on the ground virtually without shelter, Mr. Vroom said.

The American missionaries, fully acquainted with these conditions, went there courageously, Mr. Vroom declared, in an attempt to help the Indians. Whether their deaths resulted from an uprising by the savages among whom they worked, or by an invasion by a hostile tribe, was unknown to officials of the union.

Dr. MacKenzie said the latter might have been the case, although he held it was possible that other white men "may have imposed on the Indians" and that the savages wreaked their wrath indiscriminately on the missionaries.

Beetles Have Many Noses on Antennae

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—That male insects of the meal-worm beetle find their mates by using hundreds of sensitive noses scattered over the tips of their waving antennae instead of by audible love songs or by sight of their inamorata's countenance, has been proved by experiments of J. Manson Valentine, of the University of North Carolina, reported by the Wistar Institute.

The male insects were excited, Mr. Valentine found, by the presence of a fluid extracted from the bodies of the females.

PILOT'S SKILL SAVES LIVES OF GOLFERS

green of the No. 8 hole. The fairway beneath was dotted with players, and to the right was the tree-bordered River road.

With nice precision, Mr. Falco set his plane down in a small triangle between the No. 3 tee and the River Road, behind a hill which momentarily hid the tee from his vision. When his plane sped up the hill, after making a terrific bounce, he was headed for the tee.

Had he veered slightly to the right, he would have found himself running down a long grade with a row of parked automobiles at the foot of it. Turning to the left he would have carried the swiftly rolling plane over the No. 6 green. He applied full right rudder and swerved the ship into the trees fringing the River road.

The plane struck at a speed estimated to be about 40 miles an hour, each wing striking a tree, and the nose of the ship sliding between them, cushioning the shock. When excited golfers reached the wreck Mr. Falco was climbing out, declaring himself unhurt.

Meanwhile, Mr. Merchant, sensing something wrong, descended to an altitude of about 1,500 feet, circling above the disabled ship and watching its descent. As soon as he saw Mr. Falco strike the trees he returned to Boiling Field and reported the accident, only to find that Mr. Falco had already telephoned, and a salvage crew under Lieut. W. A. Robertson, had been sent out to bring the wrecked trainer in.

So small was the space which Mr. Falco had to choose for his forced landing that the plane touched the ground between the No. 8 tee and W. I. Cubberly, 3629 Legation street northwest, who was playing on the fairway. All witnesses to the accident expressed admiration of the way in which the landing was made and astonishment at the fact that no one, not even the pilot or passenger, was injured.

The New Ford is an economical car to own and drive

LOW FIRST COST, LOW COST OF OPERATION AND UP-KEEP, AND LOW YEARLY DEPRECIATION MEAN A DISTINCT SAVING TO EVERY PURCHASER

NEW FORD TUDOR SEDAN $495

THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner . . . low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation. During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

Evidence of the economy of the new Ford is shown in its selection by large industrial companies which keep careful cost records. Many of these operate fleets of fifty, one hundred and two hundred Ford cars and trucks. One company has eight thousand.

Police departments of large cities are also using a large number of Fords. In their ceaseless vigil, these cars are driven virtually twenty-four hours a day.

A fleet of 42 Model A Fords in Louisville (Kentucky) covered a total of 2,620,800 miles in twelve months, or the equivalent of 109 times around the world. Five new Fords on police duty in Niagara Falls (New York) have been driven more than 100,000 miles each. In Miami (Florida) a police Ford has gone 120,000 miles.

The average for the eighteen Fords in Omaha (Nebraska) is 35,000 miles per car for two years of police service. The superintendent of automotive equipment says repairs for the fleet have been "very low."

The police departments of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit, San Francisco and other large cities use hundreds of Ford cars and trucks. In New York, the total exceeds 450.

The reasons for the good performance and economy of the new Ford are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, it is an outstanding example of craftsmanship in volume production.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact. . . . It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price. Ask the nearest Ford dealer for a demonstration.

Note These Low Prices

There is a Ford car for every need and purpose at an unusually low price. Appointments and upholstery are in keeping with its mechanical excellence. You may choose from a variety of body colors.

HAWKS FLIGHT HOME SETS TWO RECORDS

Speed Flier Returns From Havana in Eight Hours and 40 Minutes.

STOPS TWICE ON WAY

New York, Nov. 9 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Beneath blue skies and with perfect flying weather all of the way home, Frank M. Hawks, holder of the two-way transcontinental speed record between New York and various other large American cities, returned here today in a swift but unhurried flight from Havana, thereby hanging up a couple of more records for himself.

He made two stops for fuel and to pass through customs, at Miami and Charlotte, N. C., his elapsed time from Curtiss Field, Havana, to Roosevelt Field, Long Island, being 8 hours and 42 minutes and his actual flying time 8 hours and 3 minutes. This is the fastest time ever made between the Cuban capital and this city, clips 39 minutes from the New York-Havana record that Hawks set last Thursday, and gives him the amazing round-trip time of 18 hours and 3 minutes.

"A lot of folks have the erroneous idea that I am 'racing' about the country on my various flights," Hawks said after he hand landed and greeted a crowd of 5,000, present to see him come in at Roosevelt Field. "As a matter of fact, I just cruised along today, as I always do unless actually competing in a race, running my Whirlwind motor at 1,850 revolutions per minute instead of the 2,300 it makes wide open.

Gives Credit to Plane.

"The fact that I travel faster than other people simply is due to my having a plane whose cruising speed happens to be higher than the top speed of most other standard commercial airplanes."

Hawk's ship, a Wright-motored travelair low-wing monoplane, named the Texaco No. 13, averaged between 190 and 195 miles an hour from Havana here, according to the pilot's calculations, the course he flew being about 1,500 miles. He left Havana at 7:34 a. m., landed at Miami an hour and 30 minutes later, and spent 13 minutes taking on 50 gallons of gasoline and passing a perfunctory customs examination.

From Miami to Charlotte took 3 hours and 40 minutes, and 26 minutes more were consumed in taking aboard 70 gallons of fuel. The flight from there to New York was completed in 2 hours and 50 minutes, and was made at an average speed of 210 miles an hour, Hawks picking up favoring winds for the first time after leaving Charlotte.

Flies at 6,000 Feet.

He said he flew at an altitude of 5,000 to 6,000 feet until he sighted the Navy's giant airship hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., then gradually nosed down until he crossed New York City and flashed across Roosevelt Field at a height of 2,000 feet, putting on a good show for the crowd for several minutes before landing.

He got a tremendous ovation after telling about his trip over the loud speakers. His first act after taxiing up to the operations office was to instruct his mechanic, Pete Claussen, on what to do with the plane. Then he greeted his wife and others who had come to the field to see him land, asked for a cigaret and told newspapermen about his trip and the "splendid cooperation" of the Cuban authorities with whom he had to deal.

DRYING UP COLOMBIA HAS BEEN CHECKED

Experiment With Prohibition Has Had Bad Results in Finances.

HAS BIG LIQUOR DEBT

Special to The Washington Post.

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 9.—Colombia's experiment with partial prohibition has had unfortunate financial results, and as a consequence the dry movement, which at one period seemed to be gaining considerable headway, has been definitely checked.

The movement to dry up Colombia began in 1928 when prohibition advocates put a bill through congress raising by degrees the tax on imported liquors by almost 700 per cent. A bottle of gin or whisky in Colombia today costs from $9 to $11, much more than the cost in dry America. Light wines such as claret, port, muscatel, &c., of which goodly quantities are consumed, cost from $2.50 to $5 a bottle.

Traffic State Monopoly.

The traffic in liquor and wines is a state monopoly in Colombia, the various states deriving the bulk of their revenues from the sale and subsale of beers and alcoholic beverages. When the new taxes came into effect imports of foreign liquors fell off at an alarming rate, and the states had great difficulty in making their respective budgets balance.

In fact, their revenues were cut by almost 50 per cent, and the bootlegger was beginning to make his appearance. So the governors sent protests to Bogota, informing the secretary of the treasury that if the national government could stand the loss in revenue the states couldn't, and asking for immediate relief.

Has Liquor Revenue Debt.

The question then was put up to congress, and the prohibitionists in both houses, determined to keep the dry fires burning, passed a new bill by which the government agreed to reimburse the states for any loss in revenue due to the high liquor taxes and the drastic drop in consumption.

The upshot of it all is that the Bogota government today finds itself burdened with a liquor revenue debt to the states which in the present crisis it is unable to pay. Faced by this evil, President Olaya Herrera, through the minister of the treasury, Francisco de Paula Perez, has sent a bill to congress for the repeal of the antialcoholic act, as it is known, restoring the old tax on whisky, beer and light wines.

Bishop Griswold Able To Hold Recent Gains

Chicago, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Physicians attending Bishop Sheldon Munson Griswold, of the Episcopal Diocese of Chicago, reported tonight that he was holding his ground satisfactorily. He entered the Evanston Hospital a month ago today.

"Bishop Griswold resumed taking nourishment today," Dr. Dwight Clark announced. "He had not done so for 48 hours previously. This is undoubtedly a good sign. The bishop is holding his ground satisfactorily."

Sergeant Only Victim On Pickpocket Watch

Detroit, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Sergt. Frank Dombecky, eagle-eyed ace of the First Precinct antipickpocket squad, along with 29 other plainclothes men, was assigned to watch the Fordham-University of Detroit football crowd to see that the "dips" kept away from the pockets of excited fans.

So successful was the work of Sergt. Dombecky and his associates that only one instance of pocket picking was reported. A bill fold containing $8 was taken from the hip pocket of Sergt. Frank Dombecky.

AMMEL TAKES OFF ON HOP TO PANAMA

Hopes to Reach France Field, 2,270 Miles Distant, Without Stop.

SETS 22 HOURS FOR TRIP

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Capt. Roy W. Ammel, Chicago broker, hopped off from the municipal airport on Barren Island at 2:10 p. m. today on a 2,270-mile nonstop flight to Panama, his greatest aerial adventure since his war bird days in the Army.

He hopes to reach France Field, Panama, in 21 or 22 hours. He carried 703 gallons of gasoline and 94 of oil. This supply, he believes, will be ample, barring abnormal weather conditions.

He arrived at the field long before 2 o'clock, the time set for his departure after darkness had prevented his take-off yesterday. He and his mechanic, Don Young, then puttered around the beautiful low-winged monoplane, making last minute adjustments.

The motor was warmed up. At 2:10, the blocks were kicked from the wheels, Capt. Ammel shook hands with those about him and smilingly crawled into the cockpit. The motor roared and he was off.

The plane roared down the 4,000-foot concrete runway, largest in the country, then rose gracefully in spite of the heavy fuel load. He traveled a short distance, turned, and circled the field in a final gesture of farewell and soon was out of sight.

Capt. Ammel's ship has a 500-horsepower motor, with a cruising speed of 135 miles an hour.

The flier, born in Medora, N. Dak., came into the aviation limelight last September, when he arrived at Roosevelt Field and announced plans of a hop to Paris, then to Berlin or Rome if his fuel sufficed.

An innovation in connection with the projected flight was the installation of a speech-record device in the plane. This will enable the flier to make a record of the trip without use of paper or pencil.

After several postponements, the Atlantic flight was abandoned.

BOYNTON SETS NEW JUNIOR AIR RECORD

Lands at Rockland, Me., From California, Breaking Both of Buck's Marks.

CHEERED BY THOUSANDS

Rockland, Me., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Stanley Boynton, 18-year-old Lexington (Mass.) aviator, landed here late today to complete a round trip transcontinental flight begun at this airport October 17, in which he made two new junior records.

Ten thousand spectators cheered the boy flier as he set his monoplane down at 4:20 p. m., with an elapsed flying time behind him of 20 hours and 29 minutes from Los Angeles. This cut by 3 hours 24 minutes the previous West to East record of Robert Buck, of Elizabeth, N. J. On the westward air trail he bettered Buck's time by more than 4½ hours.

Thousands Jam Field.

The last leg of his flight, and the roughest of the entire trip, Boyntop said, was made from Rutland, Vt., after he had been forced down by rain while flying from Rochester, N. Y., today.

Boynton landed amid a pandemonium of whistles and automobile horns on the field where he learned to fly. He appeared as fresh and unfatigued as when he stepped into his plane two weeks ago for the long grind.

Thousands of persons, including his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Boynton, of Lexington, surged out on the field as the plane stopped, and the flier was borne aloft on the shoulders of the crowd.

Mayor Presents Roses.

He was presented a bouquet of roses by Mayor Charles Richardson of Rockland, who extended the official greetings of the city. In a brief response the youth thanked the officials of the city and airport for their cooperation in his flight. Later he accompanied his parents to the home of friends.

In bettering both of Buck's records, the Lexington youth flew a longer distance than any previous transcontinental flier, as his elapsed time was reckoned from Rockland and return. Buck flew from New York.

On the westward flight to Los Angeles, Boynton lopped 4 hours 31 minutes from Buck's time of 23 hours 33 minutes. Buck's time for the eastward trip was 23 hours 47 minutes.

Reelection Cost Montague Nothing

Virginia Representative Files Statement Showing No Expenditures.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Representative Andrew Jackson Montague, of the Third Virginia District, in a statement of expenses for his successful campaign to succeed himself, filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth, said he had spent "nothing."

The statement from Representative Montague, filed this week, was the first of all candidates who participated in the general election submitted to Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth.

Under the Virginia election laws, the candidates must file their statements of expense with the clerk of the circuit court, if they are county residents, and the clerk of the corporation if they reside in a city, and also with the secretary of the Commonwealth.

Aviatrix Missing On Flight to Tokyo

Franco-Russian Vanishes After Leaving Paris for Marseilles.

Paris, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The air ministry still was without word today of Mlle. Lena Bernstein, Franco-Russian flier, who had left Paris at 7 o'clock yesterday morning on a flight to Tokyo, and who had intended to make Marseilles her first stop.

She did not reach the southern city, although scheduled to get there about 2:30 p. m. yesterday. Officials held tonight that she might have flown over the Italian frontier and landed in some out-of-the-way place.

The aviatrix, who once held the world's endurance record over a closed circuit, was accompanied by a mechanic Georges Appert. Her craft was a monoplane equipped with a 230-horsepower engine.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

TAX REDUCTION.

The most important subject that will come before Congress when it assembles next month, so far as the public is concerned, will be continuation of the income tax reduction. President Hoover is making every effort to so arrange the budget that the 1 per cent reduction put into effect last year as an aid to business recovery may be maintained. Business is in greater need of the concession now than it was a year ago.

A recent report from the Treasury showed a decrease of $148,000,000 in the income taxes collected during the first nine months of this year. Customs receipts have also fallen off. The President is conducting a program of rigid economy to bring the expenses of the Government down to a level with the receipts. But at the same time construction of public buildings has been accelerated to relieve unemployment, and vast sums are being expended in this work.

Whether or not the budget can be so trimmed down as to allow for continuation of the tax reduction under these circumstances is still a question. Hope for the lower rates seems to hinge on the payment of war debt installments by foreign governments. If funds from this source are not sufficient to balance the budget, there is only one way that the Government can provide for continuation of the reduction; that is by cutting down the payments on America's own national debt.

By all means the tax reduction ought to be maintained. Business is in no condition to sustain a tax increase over last year's rates. The administration is committed to a program of giving business every possible encouragement.

Nothing would be lost by slowing up the rate of payment on the Government's obligations growing out of the war. Approximately $9,000,000,000 of this debt has been liquidated in the last twelve years. At the present rate of payment the debt will soon be wiped out, and the foreign governments which owe a considerable portion of this sum to the United States will feel no moral obligation to continue payments.

During these hard times the Government would be fully justified in cutting down its payments on the national debt to a figure commensurate with the amount the United States is receiving from foreign debtors. This would make possible a real tax reduction, and would be a valuable stimulus for business. When prosperity returns receipts will increase automatically and the tax rates could be raised again if necessary. Under any circumstances it is a short-sighted policy to maintain a high tax rate to pay off that portion of the debt which represents the obligations of foreign nations, thus taking away their incentive to pay.

POWER OF WELL-KNOWN NAMES.

Some weeks before the election the Boston Transcript estimated that about 40,000 voters of Massachusetts would cast their ballots for Marcus A. Coolidge under the impression that they were voting for Calvin Coolidge. The former President is so well known that it is difficult to understand how such confusion could arise. But facts support the Transcript's conclusion.

The Democratic Mr. Coolidge was elected to the Senate in spite of the fact that the Republican Mr. Coolidge spoke publicly in favor of William M. Butler, the opposing candidate. Massachusetts is normally a Republican State. Twelve out of the sixteen representatives elected are members of the G. O. P. Yet Mr. Coolidge defeated his Republican opponent by more than 112,000 votes.

Furthermore, Mr. Coolidge ran far ahead of his ticket. He received 45,000 votes more than Joseph B. Ely, Democrat, who was elected governor. An attempt is made to attribute Mr. Coolidge's popularity to his demand for repeal of the eighteenth amendment. But his running mate, Mr. Ely, is also a wet. Moreover, Mr. Coolidge received 10,000 more votes than were cast for the wet cause in the Statewide referendum. The logical conclusion is that there is magic in the name he bears.

Gov. Roosevelt of New York, who is only a distant cousin of the late Theodore Roosevelt, demonstrated remarkable popularity. His victory was conceded from the beginning, but few forecasters saw that he would pile up a plurality of 700,000 votes. The name of Roosevelt sticks in the minds of the old-timers. They may not know the governor or anything about him, but his name earns confidence. With that great body of voters who take no interest in issues a popular name is a potent psychological factor.

It is not surprising to find some of the lesser lights in politics saying: "I don't care what you say, so long as you quote me."

EMERGENCY LEGISLATION.

The country will favor liberal emergency appropriations by Congress to expedite public works and to help drought-stricken farmers to procure seeds. President Hoover's plan to push Federal improvements at extra speed in order to give employment during this slack period is a proper exercise of government authority, and there should be no opposition in Congress on partisan or technical grounds. It is time for Congress to stretch a point in favor of the unemployed and the drought sufferers.

Certain spokesmen of the Democratic party have announced that they will cooperate with the President and the Republican party in plans to improve economic conditions. Within a few days the Democrats in Congress will have an opportunity to demonstrate whether or not they can refrain from partisan obstruction for the sake of the public welfare. They did not do it at the last session, but on the contrary resorted to many devices to prevent speedy enactment of tariff and farm relief. Opposition to President Hoover's nominations consumed valuable time that might have been employed in the public interest. Generous and magnanimous as may have been the sentiments that swelled the Democratic bosom last week, as the returns of Democratic gains were received, it is not to be expected that the opposition party will sink partisanship if a chance should offer for embarrassing President Hoover.

If Democrats and insurgents are in the melting mood they can greatly assist in expediting relief measures by approving of President Hoover's nominations, thus clearing the slate for unemployment legislation. But who, except perhaps generous Al Smith, expects that Congress Democrats and insurgents will really lend a hand to the administration?

COMMON COLDS.

It is estimated that the common cold costs the American people at least $2,000,000,000 a year in loss of wages, but it is the unpleasantness, the depression approaching acute melancholia, the discomfort and the annoyance of the common cold that give rise to the public interest in methods of cold prevention and cure. Every one suffers on occasion with colds. Almost every one has his favorite cold "cure." But it is only recently that science has seemed to make progress toward solving the mysteries of the complaint. It now appears that, at least, the cause of the common cold has been established.

Three physicians of Columbia University have been experimenting for the past two years to discover whether the common cold can be transmitted to anthropoid apes and to human beings by means of a filterable agent. Their report was recently published in the Journal of Experimental Medicine. The doctors earlier had become convinced that colds were not caused primarily by increases or changes in quality of the bacteria normally found in the nasal passages, and by further experiment they established to their own satisfaction that colds can be transmitted to man and ape by intranasal innoculation of filtered nasal washings. As a result of the experiments they believe that the active causative agent of the cold is a submicroscopic virus.

Similar conclusions have been reached by physicians on the staff of Johns Hopkins University. Their study of the common cold is supported by the $195,000 John J. Abel Fund established in 1928 by the Chemical Foundation. Drs. Doull and Long are convinced that the ailment is transmitted by a disease-producting virus so small that it can not be seen through the most powerful microscope or captured in the finest filter. It has been found impossible to make the virus grow in the laboratory, but the discovery is important in that it strengthens the theory that colds are the result of infection and not merely the product of chemical changes in the body. Moreover, the discovery holds the promise that some day a vaccine may be discovered or developed that can be used to build up an immunity to colds in human beings.

For the time being, however, humankind will have to continue to guard against contracting colds by the methods that have been adopted empirically through the years. Keep out of drafts; keep your feet dry; avoid those whose sneezing, watery eyes or reddened noses betray the fact that they have been bitten by the virus. When tempted to ignore the precautions, bear in mind that the famous old home remedy for colds can no longer be legally procured.

TIMBER FAMINE IN SIGHT.

A new warning as to the depletion of America's timber lands has been issued by the United States Forest Service. The problem is approaching a crisis. Demands for conservation and reforestation are heard everywhere. Yet nothing is done about it.

In 1929, the Forest Service report shows, 110,000 acres were planted and restored to a productive status. But 10,000,000 acres of forest was cut over. The United States takes about 25,000,000,000 cubic feet of lumber from its forests every year. More than 75 per cent of this is a direct and unreplaced drain upon our forest resources.

An actual timber shortage already exists in the United States. This country consumes nearly half of the world's out of timber, which is four times as much as it is now producing. The demand for such products as construction lumber and paper is tremendous. If nothing is done toward restoration of wooded areas, the country will soon be dependent upon foreign countries for a large part of its forest products. But the supply in other countries is also depleted. A survey of the principal wood-producing countries shows that the accessible supply of timber, particularly the coniferous varieties, is not adequate to meet the needs of the twentieth century.

Think of a nation with millions of acres of surplus land and overproduction on its farms, going abroad for its timber! Yet that is the prospect facing the United States. At the present rate of reforestation it would require more than 2,000 years to reclaim the denuded areas, if further exploitation of the forests were stopped. The most discouraging aspect of the problem is that the soil on these denuded areas is being gradually washed away, leaving the once productive forest lands worthless.

One remedy suggested by the Forest Service is revision of the taxation systems for forest land. Commercial timber crops are profitable in some localities, but the burden of paying taxes on a stand of timber about 40 times before it is ready to harvest hinders development. A more equitable tax plan would encourage timber growers in some States, but it will never provide the incentive to restore the wasted forest areas.

Apparently the only possibility of saving the country from a timber famine is by State and Federal acquisition of timber lands, followed by extensive reforestation programs.

What happened to those plans brought forth in November, 1928, to scrap the Democratic party?

The standard yardstick has shrunk two one-thousandths of an inch, but look at the way the dollar has been expanding.

President Ortiz Rubio cabled the football team of the University of Mexico on the eve of its game with Mississippi College to "play as gentlemen." But the game was football, Mr. President!

POPULATION TRENDS

By R. L. TOMBLEN,
In the Bell Telephone Quarterly.

The Nation's gain in population between 1920 and 1930 was the largest, numerically, ever recorded by the Federal census. Continental United States on April 1, 1930, was found by Government enumerators to have had 122,698,190 people, or 16,987,570 more than the number reported for January 1, 1920. This increase exceeds by more than a million the largest previous gain, that occurring in the period 1900-1910.

Census returns from various districts in all parts of the United States indicate that there is a definite trend away from the smaller towns and the unincorporated areas. Of the 3,200 counties in the country which contain no community of 10,000 or more population, about 1,200 declined between 1920 and 1930. In the majority of the remaining counties the gains were comparatively slight, while in others there were indications of losses in the distinctly rural portions. These early reports tend to substantiate the Department of Agriculture estimate that the last decade has in all probability seen a loss of 4,000,000 people on the farms of the United States.

These movements of rural population may be illustrated by the group of Lake States, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. These States have a total of 436 counties, of which 241 lost population during the past decade. Of the losing counties, 220 were predominantly rural and in the aggregate their loss amounted to 8 per cent of their 1920 population in addition to their entire natural increase. The 71 other counties with no place of 10,000 or more inhabitants gained only 5 per cent since 1920; and of these, 32 were adjacent to counties distinctly urban in character.

Since 1920, there has been a net increase of 21 in the class of cities having between 50,000 and 100,000 inhabitants and of 35 in the 25,000 to 50,000 group. These two groups each accounted for about 8 per cent of the national growth and each increased about 28 per cent. Cities with 100,000 or more increased in number from 68 in 1920 to 94 in 1930 and now include about 30 per cent of the total population of the country. Between 1920 and 1930 these 94 cities gained about 7,000,000, representing a 24 per cent rate of growth and amounting to over 41 per cent of the national increase.

The total growth of the largest ten cities in the United States amounted to 3,757,000, an increase at the rate of 24.4 per cent—a rate which is 50 per cent higher than that for the Nation as a whole.

In marked contrast to the almost universal urban growth throughout the country, there were a few cities that recorded losses of population during the last ten years due to the outward migration of workers seeking employment elsewhere. This was especially true of the textile and shoe cities of New England—Manchester, New Bedford, Fall River, Lawrence, Lowell, Brockton and Haverhill—which all suffered considerable declines due to the removal of many of their mills to other areas. People moved not only from rural to urban districts but also between cities and from one industry to another, according to the relative opportunities for employment.

However, there were some cities, starting as boom towns in certain industries, which retained their early growth and made substantial gains after the impetus of the initial stimulus subsided. During the boom period these cities, of which Wichita Falls and Shreveport are good examples, were also developing permanent commercial activities which have since enabled them to maintain their lead over longer established cities.

As might be expected from the extensive rural losses and the irregular urban gains, the population growth of the United States between 1920 and 1930 was very unevenly distributed among the several sections of the country. In general, the large and populous States recorded the most gain, while those devoted chiefly to farming showed the least.

On Being Neighborly.
Philadelphia Public Ledger: The trouble with the average American citizen is that he can't let his neighbor alone. He feels called upon to correct and instruct him.

This annoys his neighbor more or less, but it is as nothing compared to the annoyance the corrector and instructor suffers. And his inability to shape his neighbor to his own formula probably shortens his life by 10 to 15 years. A man should let his neighbor alone for his own sake.

JUST FOLKS

ACHIEVEMENT.

The shoulders weary and the muscles ache.
Rest, rest, we plead, let comfort be again,
And ease return and absent all of pain.
Pleasure is all we are content to take,
But who wants roses oft the ground must break;
Who would a higher footing here attain
Must suffer much his little dream to gain,
And struggle onward for achievement's sake.
That rest which follows weariness is sweet,
But peace and pleasure properly are brief;
They are the antidotes life gives for grief,
Despair and disappointment and defeat;
They are achievement's solace for man's pain
And only good because so hard to gain.

The Relative Value of Trinkets Is Made Clear When You Are Packing Up to Leave.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE whole of sound philosophy may be expressed in two brief sentences.

Happiness depends upon a proper understanding of values.

And a proper understanding of values is the height of wisdom.

A man's understanding of values gives the measure of his intelligence.

The boy of ten years values a stick with a string attached. To him it represents a horse, and he will fight to protect it and weep over its loss.

At the age of twenty he smiles at the fancies of boyhood, for now he values above all other things the praise and prizes given to athletes, the favor of a maiden, the opportunity to go adventuring, membership in a fraternity, a fast automobile.

Again at forty he looks back and is amused and a little ashamed by the memory of his youthful enthusiasms. Now his children and his mate are his chief treasures. Next to them he values his place in the world of business, his reputation for ability and integrity, his friends, his properties.

And at last, when active life is behind him and he knows the end is near, he realizes that the things of greatest worth are life itself and the health to enjoy it, a clear conscience, the memory of good work and good deeds, and a comforting faith with which to face the end.

For the first time he understands the shortness of life and the value of health. He would not waste the one nor imperil the other if he could live again. He realizes now the folly of storing up regrets and bitter memories. And now at last he realizes how trivial are the trinkets and play-pretties and properties for which men strive and quarrel and sacrifice themselves.

He has learned wisdom. He has acquired a sound philosophy. He knows values. But he has learned too late.

How much of bitterness and conflict and anxiety and remorse he could have avoided if he had acquired a proper sense of values in his youth.

How worthless money seems when honor and reputation are lost! How trivial fame and properties seem when health is gone! What utter trash all else seems when love is lost!

The man who would live wisely, at peace with himself, free of turmoil and bitterness, must know the true value of all things life has to offer.

And the true value of anything is the value he would place upon it if he had but a day to live.

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

Tariff Tinkering Threatened.
Baltimore Sun.

As a result of Tuesday's political tornado, Washington is already buzzing with plans to do something to remedy the vicious Smoot-Hawley tariff which almost daily produces trade-killing kick-backs from foreign countries.

One of the proposals designed to undo some of the Smoot-Hawley damage is to transfer final authority over flexible tariff rates from the President to Congress. The Senate approved such a plan when the Smoot-Hawley bill was under consideration, but the President turned thumbs down and the House followed his lead.

The arguments in favor of transferring final authority over flexible tariff rates from the President to Congress are decidedly cogent. They should weigh heavily in the discussion of congressional plans to overcome the havoc wrought by the Smoot-Hawley folly.

Minority Place Is Best.
New York Times.

The Democrats will be fortunate if they can not organize either House. They have enough votes in both to upset any partisan Republican program. They have enough votes in both to gain a hearing, in committee and on the floor, for any legislative program which they may evolve for the benefit of their 1932 platform. But as a minority, not holding the speakership and the major committee chairmanships, they can not be charged with responsibility for what Congress does or fails to do. It is an ideal position for an opposition party seeking the next Presidency. Before the election the longest heads in the Democratic party were expressing the hope that there would be great gains, but a narrow failure to control. That is what happened.

Foes Better Than Traitors.
Detroit News.

The town cynic is hopeful the final returns will show a Democratic Congress, because Mr. Hoover needs its support.

Morrow for Vice President.
Morristown Jerseyman.

Defeat is a complete stranger to Dwight W. Morrow. New Jersey salutes him today. If events do not compel the nomination of Mr. Morrow for President in 1932 then he most certainly will be nominated for Vice President and with him on the ticket, even in second place, no Democrat can beat the party, even with hard times working for the Democracy, which will not be the case.

Another little problem the triumphant Democrats face is finding enough jobs to satisfy the boys who worked so hard in the trenches.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Objects to Comparison of Church and Theater as Moral Agents to the Discredit of the Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those who are addicted to the use of the public platform should be ordinarily careful to get their thinking straight; otherwise, so far as the audience follows, it is misled, and the speaker becomes a "blind leader." Mr. Murdock Pemberton, in an address on Wednesday evening, at the McKinley High School, is reported to have said: "The theater is more effective than the church in improving the public, for it is more glamorous and its appeal is wider." He glibly puts the two forces on the same plane and compares them as though their aims were similar. Nothing could be farther from the facts. They are as different as scientific research and manual labor, both proper, but operating in different fields.

The church, working in the spiritual realm, seeks to establish a basis of character on principles of righteousness, that will endure the strain of adversity in calmness, and of persecution, even, without the desire for revenge, and to so improve all the activities of life that the right side of all questions will certainly be chosen.

Those who live up to the standards of the spiritual leadership of the Christian religion—which the church is established to promulgate—are the best people we have, wherever found. The church is not a commercial enterprise, to fatten the fortunes of the producers of results, nor to provide fame for its stars.

But because of the character of its results no "glamour" need be considered and would be out of place if introduced. No one questions the fact that there are plays that are so intellectually inspiring that they have stood the test of the ablest critics for generations, and will continue to do so. What Shakespeare has done for literature is appreciated and applauded. The first purpose of the theater is commercial, and when a play fails it is because it is not a financial success. No one connected with the production of a play is at all concerned about the improvement of the individual character of those who compose the audience, while that is the chief concern of those who conduct the services in our churches. Some plays, very many in fact, in the last five years have been of such salacious character that the police have closed the house, and others that somehow "got by" were so suggestive of obscenity that no self-respecting man would take his daughter to see them, and these plays were "glamorous."

It would seem only fair that Mr. Pemberton "recalibrate his range finder" on ethics and religion, before he calls for a discard of the church, which must be inferred by his language, in favor of the theater, because "its appeal is wider."

This writer has no quarrel with the theater, or its friends, so long as it is kept decent and clean, and he claims that until the municipal police prevent the services in a Christian church, because they are dangerous to the morals of our youth, Mr. Pemberton has no right to place the church and the theater side by side.

ARTHUR GIBSON MORSE.

Analysis of the Nature of the Wet and Dry Vote.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent letter "Hickory" speaks of the "mushroom wet-dry vote" as our country's finest "example of an unstable equilibrium in politics." The inference to be drawn is, I presume, that the wet-dry vote will always be hard for politicians to handle.

"Hickory's" statement may be entitled to serious consideration, but I think it falls somewhat short of hitting off the actuality.

A moment's consideration should convince any one that the dry side of the great controversy is not a sudden growth, but has been gathering strength for generations. Within recent years it has become a political fixture in some localities and it can not with the slightest approach to truth be called a "mushroom" development.

In regard to the wet side, leaving out of consideration a few professional malcontents, "Hickory" is right. The wet vote is, so to speak, in a constant state of political fluidity.

It is composed to a great extent of individuals who during long years of prohibition have lost their thirst for "booze," although not yet entirely regenerated and free from the disreputable outlook of the corner groggery.

To these may be added many voters born too late to become by actual contact familiar with the evils of strong drink.

In a sense, those who are not in the class with what we call the "extreme drys" may all be called "wets," although their attitude in regard to prohibition is that of more or less indifference so far as party alignment is concerned. That is to say that "wetness" is the very last issue they would choose to bother about if they were called upon to consider political questions one at a time.

It looks clear enough to me that what is loosely called the "wet vote" is not really as dripping as we are asked to believe and that, in its future efforts to hold its own, the Grand Old Party might do worse than propitiate the definitely located, dependable and militant drys.

AUSTRIAN FASCISTS FAIL IN ELECTION

First Returns Do Not Give Them Single Seat in Parliament.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS GAIN

Vienna, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Complete returns for Vienna and from five provincial electoral wards showed tonight that the Fascist Heimwehr, which was considered a strong threat in the parliamentary campaign, had not won a seat in the national elections today.

The Social Democratic party, which always has been the strongest in Vienna, gained one seat in the capital, jumping from 29 in the last house to 30 in the next one.

The Christian social group, also strong heretofore, lost three mandates in Vienna, falling from 14 to 11, while Dr. Johann Schober's newly formed Economic party captured four seats.

In four provincial wards early returns indicated that the Christian Socials had lost six mandates and the Social Democrats one.

No Major Disturbances Occur.

Reports from over the country indicated that no major disturbances occurred. Som had feared that the Fascists might create trouble, but the young leader, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, told a Fascist meeting last night that the party was not particularly interested in the election. He added that the Fascists were indifferent as to the capture of mandates, saying the party intended to govern Austria from outside the walls of the national assembly anyway.

The Fascists favor a stern dictatorship and long have opposed parliamentary government, labeling parliament a "jabbering-booth."

Fourteen parties participated in the elections, but of these the Christian Socials, the Social Democrats and the Fascist Heimwehr were reckoned the strongest. The new party of Dr. Schober, who formerly was chancellor, was calculated to cut somewhat into the Christian Socials, as the returns indicate.

Future Line-Up Uncertain.

Since very few provincial centers had been heard from tonight, there were few who would predict tonight what the future line-ups would be.

The parliament over which Schober presided had the Social Democrats, with 71 seats, on the one side and government coalition bloc on the other. This was composed of the Christian Socials, with 73 seats themselves, the Farmer's party and the Pan-Germans.

Trouble beset the government bloc, resulting in Schober's resignation, and the Socialists hoped in this parliamentary election to increase their mandates to a point that would make the formation of a government possible.

Burghers Pray as Fire Menaces Town; 1 Dead

Beiminister, Pa., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Residents of this little Bucks County town prayed in the streets today for deliverance as flames swept through its main buildings and for a time threatened the village with destruction. While firemen from seventeen nearby towns were speeding to the fire two engines overturned, killing William Fisher, a volunteer fireman, and injuring eight others, one seriously.

Two three-story buildings, a general store and a warehouse and two garages were destroyed, and the village school and several other buildings damaged. Persons whose property was damaged or destroyed said the combined damage was approximately $100,000.

"Vote Communist" Sign Defies Erasure Efforts

New York, Nov. 9 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Efforts to erase the exhortatoin to "vote Communist" painted on an outside wall of the State Courts Building at Duane and Center streets last week already have cost the city more than $350, it was learned today, and still the sign in large lettering of red paint remains visible.

Workmen who have been on the job most of the week today expressed themselves as convinced that sandblasting will have to be resorted to in order to remove the defacement. A secret mixture was used for the paint with which the letters were formed, they believe.

DO-X, Delayed by Fog, Off for England Today

Amsterdam, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Fog over the English Channel kept the German air liner DO-X from taking off today for Calshot, England, on the second leg of its flight to New York.

It was announced officially that the flight would be made tomorrow.

Illness Delays Conductor's Trip.

Genoa, Italy, Nov. 9 (A.P.)—Gioria Polacco, conductor of the Chicago Opera, was ordered to a hospital today, but his condition was said not to be alarming. He had planned to sail for the United States last week, but was delayed by illness.

HITLERITES MOURN BIRTH OF REPUBLIC

Gather on Twelfth Anniversary, Hear Greater Fatherland Predicted.

NO UNTOWARD INCIDENTS

Munich, Germany, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Two thousand National Socialists today held mourning services here, to commemorate the twelfth anniversary of the revolution which established the German republic.

They gathered around and in the historic Buergerbrau beer cellar, where Adolph Hitler had planned his abortive conspiracy to overthrow the present German government in 1923. The ceremonies were conducted without disorder, Hitler himself keeping in the background.

The Bavarian government's ban on Fascist uniforms continued in force, but a hundred or so of the leading Fascists had obtained special permission to don the brown shirts for the occasion. The program was largely musical, the only speaker being the Fascist divisional commander, Alfred Wagner, a member of the Bavarian Diet.

In moderate language, Wagner said the present government had lost all touch with the nation, and it was to Hitler's credit that he had aroused six and one-half million citizens to a readiness to stake all for the Nationalist idea.

Referring to "our Austrian brethren, who, he said, also are busy with rebuilding their state along Fascist lines, Wagner predicted the day would come when, standing shoulder to shoulder, Germans and Austrians would reconstruct a greater German fatherland.

To music especially composed as a Fascist march, the meeting dispersed in orderly fashion. Previously, the National Socialists had participated in official mourning exercises for the war dead at the army memorial, in front of the Army Museum.

U. S. Lifts Tariff on British Art to Be Sold for Charity

Efforts of Wales, Dawes and Mellon Overcome Customs Obstacles; Receipts for 400 Paintings Will Aid World War Veterans.

London, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales, aided by Ambassador Dawes and Secretary Mellon, has made a breach in the United States tariff wall to permit the sale of pictures by British artists in aid of the prince's personal charity fund for British war veterans.

Nearly 400 paintings will comprise a floating art gallery on the liner Aquitania, sailing from Southampton November 22 for New York, where the pictures will be sold to anyone who cares to visit the ship and buy. Ambassador Dawes announced receipt of a cablegram from Secretary Mellon saying that, as an act of international courtesy, permission would be granted for holding the exhibition on the Aquitania in New York harbor and allowing free customs entry of the paintings, drawings and frames.

An exhibition will be held on the liner at Southampton November 21 with Ambassador Dawes attending.

Prince George will officiate on behalf of his brother.

SPANISH ROYALISTS FEARFUL OF REVOLT

Aristocrats Are Not So Well Prepared for Blow as Alfonso.

PRINCE HOPE OF COURT

San Sebastian, Spain, Nov. 9 (N.Y. W.N.S.).—Perhaps even greater concern than the rising tide of republicanism in Spain is causing King Alfonso, is the worry that the antimonarchical movement is giving the Royalists and aristocracy of the country.

If Alfonso goes—and few really informed people have any doubt but that he will be the last king to rule the country—he personally need not worry. Enough royal wealth has been invested abroad to keep him and his descendants in plenty for generations to come.

Spanish royalty and aristocracy, however, have no such future. Their property and life is centered in Spain, and they must take what comes. Consequently here in San Sebastian, King Alfonso's favorite summer capital, court intrigue has been prevalent since the days when Primo de Rivera's passing became certain.

Various Rival Factions.

Inside the Spanish court there have been, until recently, various rival factions bent on preserving their financial and social station in Spanish life. Right under the king's nose groups have been bartering as to which of their favorites should be advanced in case the popular opposition forces King Alfonso to abdicate.

According to people "on the inside," the growing menace of republicanism, which is evident all over the country these days, has driven the various factions in the royal household together under a single banner.

With the report of the physician of the court that the heir to the throne, Prince Don Jaime, is making rapid strides toward recovery from the "Battenburg malady," royalists are now pinning their hopes for the future on the weakling prince.

Union May Aid Dynasty.

If present plans materialize, Don Jaime will be married off to a Spanish girl of aristocratic, if not royal, origin within the coming year. Since the dreaded "hemophyie" is supposed to be transmitted only through the feminine line, and only to male offspring, a union with Don Jaime and a perfectly healthy and unrelated line would rejuvenate the dynasty, it is argued.

Republicanism in Spain is not so much republicanism as it is anti-Alfonsism. Ever since the Morocco scandals were smothered under the protective folds of Primo de Rivera's military usurpation the king has been anathema to the politicians. His unfair treatment of Primo de Rivera, who stood him in good stead in the critical days of 1926, alienated many supporters in the army, where Primo was justifiedly popular.

Will Rewards Man For Friendly Deed

Former Valet Who Nursed Baronet Bequeathed 20,000 Pounds.

London, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Greenville Owen Sampson, who befriended a baronet and later became his valet, has just learned from a newspaper that his master left him £20,000 (about $100,000) in his will. Sampson was formerly a page boy at White's, one of London's famous clubs.

The baronet was Sir Charles W. E. C. Hartopp, once first secretary in the British Legation in Persia. When Hartopp became seriously ill in Cairo some years ago, Sampson nursed him back to health.

This devotion received a tribute in the will as "service I can never repay." The news of the legacy came as a complete surprise to Sampson. He remained quite calm in his good fortune, however, and expects to invest the money. Also he intends to carry on with his job as head waiter, which recently he has held at another London club.

Sound Common Stocks
Buy Now for Income and Profit

GENERAL interest in common stocks has very greatly increased in the last decade. It rests on the belief that sound American business enterprises are bound to grow; that equity investments in those enterprises will advance in value correspondingly.

This is a logical point of view. Popular acceptance of it came with such momentum, however, and over such a comparatively short term of years that it contributed, along with other influences, to over-stimulation of the stock market. The result was the great bull movement of 1929 and, subsequently, the sudden let-down of last November.

The readjustment of market prices has not in any way affected the soundness of common stock investment, as such. These readjustments have happened before. There was one as recently as 1924—almost forgotten now, although of major importance at the time. There was one in 1921, one in 1907, and so on back.

Recovery followed each depression in the past (note the chart), the country's natural prosperity returned, and corporate earnings rose to high levels. It is reasonable to believe that the country will recover—and recover fully—from the present depression. To hold otherwise is to hold that America has passed its peak of economic development, and can not continue to go forward.

The recovery, as it develops, will be reflected in increased corporate earnings and in the market value of common stocks.

Bonds and preferred stocks belong in every investment account, of course. Their stability and assured income entitle them to special consideration—usually to first consideration. But there is a logical place, too, for common stocks, both for income and capital appreciation.

The very fact that the yield and capital value of bonds and preferred stock are fixed, makes such securities relatively unresponsive to fluctuations in the purchasing power of the dollar. Common stocks, on the other hand, are particularly useful as a hedge against declines in purchasing power. Characteristically, corporate earning power increases in periods of rising commodity prices, and dividend increases go along with expansion in earnings. Even in a period when the long term trend of prices is downward, cyclical price movements upward occur and the increased return from common stocks at such times counteracts declines in the actual purchasing power of fixed-income securities.

If it is agreed that common stocks, carefully selected for permanent holding, are a sound investment, then it will surely be agreed that the best time to make such an investment is when prices are low. That they are low today scarcely anybody will question. Whether they may go a point or a few points lower before they permanently go higher does not greatly concern the genuine investor. Very few, anyway, are ever so fortunate as to buy at the absolute low; those who wait for it may wait too long.

The important fact is this: Common stocks of sound business concerns whose earnings records are impressive, whose management is able, and whose dividend practices have been satisfactory, are now available at authentic bargain prices. The investor who is willing to disregard near-term movements of the market may buy such issues now with the assurance that, over a period, he will receive liberal and increasing dividends and a substantial capital profit.

FORMERLY both chains always broadcast the President's speech. Also when one chain has done anything of importance the other one, by way of "keeping up with Lizzie," has tried to outdo it.

At the convention of the Association of National Advertisers here tonight it will be different. The NBC alone will broadcast the speech of President Hoover and Columbia alone will bring down artists from New York and furnish talent for the occasion.

There will be a special dinner meeting tomorrow night to discuss radio, presided over by Paul B. West, of New York.

Washington winners in the Atwater-Kent audition will be presented with medals tonight during the course of a radio recital under the direction of Dr. Albert Harned at 5:30 o'clock at WRC.

Despite illness, Rabindranath Tagore will endeavor to keep his engagement tonight (WMAL, 8:30).

MERLE THORPE will return to the air tonight, inaugurating a new series of programs entitled "How's Business" (WRC, 8 o'clock).

Mr. Thorpe's first claim to fame in the Capital, however, was not as a successful business man. When a young man he organized a reporters' strike here. Every one, including the organizer, was fired, but that was what they expected.

"The best talent on the air," Harry Vonzell, announcer, a native of Los Angeles, argued, "came from California."

"The devil I did!" retorted Harry Swan, character actor.

In the first program William Gillette, the veteran actor, played only the part of Sherlock Holmes, while the part of Dr. Watson was taken by Leigh Dovell. In the following program, the part of Sherlock Holmes has been taken by Richard Gordon, who probably will continue permanently in the part. The latter took over the part with such skill that many have failed to realise that the characterization of Sherlock is not still in the hands of Mr. Billette.

All other characters are subject to change from week to week, so there will be no permanent company except for Gordon Lowell.

THE last time King George was heard in the United States at about 6 a. m., Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, climbed out of the hay a half an hour earlier and beat him to the American audience.

However, with the senator at his home in Washington State at present, it is expected that the king will have the field to himself during the broadcast at 6:58 o'clock next Wednesday morning.

It costs about a half a million dollars a year to operate a first-class broadcasting station, according to William S. Hedges, of Chicago, president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

A famous impresario remarked: "There is no use trying to fool the microphone. It takes you exactly as you are."

IN Armistice Day programs kettle-drums furnish the booming of cannon. Drumsticks beaten on the leather seat of a chair give the ratatat of a machine gun. Salt dripping out of a hole in a box held high near the microphone produces the effect of rain as the troops march toward the trenches.

Then as the storm gains fury, a brush is rubbed across the top of a drum to produce the sound effect of a torrent.

Jane Claire INTERPRETS the MODE

A brown jersey dress trimmed with a pink crocheted border, to be worn under a red brown heavy wool coat with pink collar. (Courtesy of Marynowitzky, Paris.)

New York, Nov. 9.

IT has always been said that the perfect elegante is dressed in such good taste that one is never conscious of what she is actually wearing.

Of course, this remark is open to discussion. But it is quite true that the most elegant and well-bred woman selects the quietest garments, yet garments that can not by any manner of means be accused of being plain or drab.

There is such a difference between "plain" and "simple." Simplicity is greatly to be desired, while plainness is something that every woman should avoid.

Shunning extremes, women of royal birth, who are favored both by birth and environment and then given every opportunity to cultivate and practice their instinctive good taste in clothes, invariably select garments of the quietly expensive type that other women too often overlook—whether a sensation-loving world is a bit disappointed or not!

* * * *

It is to be remembered that a beautifully made and distinctively elegant garment is worth three times the price of the less well-made and more spectacular one. And likewise that it is a real economy, as this type of garment does not fall under the way of style changes. But when you are selecting an ensemble that you know will have to last you several seasons, do not make the mistake of selecting one that is plain to the point of plainness instead of one that is elegantly simple.

Marynowitzky can do the most unusual and lovely things with colors! In the dress I have shown you today she has used brown jersey, and actually made cuffs and bordered the pleated skirt with a pink-crocheted band. The pleated skirt is attached to a hip-length plain yoke, and the pleats are stitched to the knees. The accompanying lovely slim coat is of heavy red brown wool incrusted on one side, and with a double collar, the inner one being pink.

Women's problems are the same the world over, and we've just solved one for ourselves and for you! Where to keep those none-too-attractive rubber "goodses"—that hot water bottle, that ice bag which is so seldom used but so much needed when it is needed, those rubber bathing caps that you have to wear for the shower.

You see, it was my idea, but not being too entirely sure how it would work out, I had to get Mamzelle to work it out for me, which she did with her ten clever little fingers—and wrote down how she did it as she went along, omitting the mistakes, of course. So that you, for a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to the Dare department of The Washington Post can make in any spare hour an ornamental and convenient gadget which Hangs on a nail either in the bathroom or the closet, and completely hides your rubber goods, as well as keeps them all in one place where you can find them when you want them.

Of course, you're reading Dare's weekly fashion letter in each Sunday's Washington Post.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE,
The Reading Craze.

Between the ages of 12 and 14 the average boy and girl go through a period of intensive reading.

Boys at this age seem to be especially hungry for books on science and invention, for realistic tales of adventure, for popularized history and biography.

Girls, on the other hand, show a leaning toward poetry and romance.

Many parents worry for fear that their children will become book worms. They do not realize that this period of intensive reading seldom lasts more than a year, and that it is natural.

The wisest attitude is to exploit this "craze" to its greatest advantage. This is the time to see that your child has plenty of good books to read, for it is virtually your last chance to exercise an influence on his reading tastes.

The only wise restrictions are those which are designed to protect his health. We may rightly demand a certain amount of outdoor play before we permit him to settle down to his books.

The actual substance of his reading can be limited only by indirect means. We may remove from our own library shelves objectionable books and give him plenty of good books among which there will be a sufficient number of the sort that satisfy the urge of his wish-thinking.

Remember that it is usually futile to prohibit any specific book, since the very fact that it is forbidden stimulates curiosity about it.

WORK ON BRIDGE

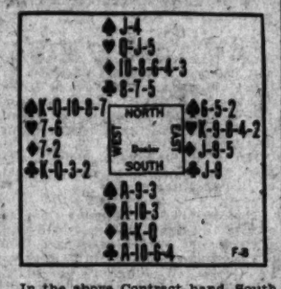
GOOD NEWS, BRIDGERS.

We are pleased to announce we can now renew the offer of Milton C. Work's great Contract and Auction booklet entitled the PLAYING Problems." Bridgers who received ceived copies from previous offers are most enthusiastic over it.

PLAYING PROBLEMS presents eighteen hands, the complete auction and contract bidding for each hand with reasons for each bid, the answers to every question and the reason for each answer in complete detail.

PLAYING PROBLEMS which will be of much greater value to the auction and contract player than many high-priced textbooks, is not for sale. It has been prepared exclusively for readers of The Washington Post by special arrangement with Mr. Work. One copy will be mailed to you upon request if you send self-addressed, stamped return envelope, together with six cents in stamps to defray part of the cost of printing and handling this 48-page booklet. Requests not complying with these conditions will be ignored.

FINDING THE RIGHT PLAY.



In the above Contract hand, South bid three No Trumps on his four Aces and count of 22; none of the other three players could overcall. (In Auction South would bid one No Trump and obtain the contract.)

The hand was played by the pupils of a well-known teacher. West led the King of Spades from three honors; it was permitted to win. Seeing dummy's lone Jack, he followed with the Queen which South also ducked; West then led the Ten of Spades, which was taken by South's Ace—North in the meantime discarded a Diamond. East played his Spades in order—Deuce, Five and Six. (If West had opened with his fourth best Spade, dummy's Jack would have won an extra Spade trick.)

At trick 4 Declarer saw nothing better to do than try to establish a fourth Club in the closed hand, hoping the adversaries would lead a Heart. He led three Diamonds, West discarding a Club, and then led the Ace of Clubs to trick 7, and another Club to trick 8; but West won with the Queen and cashed his remaining two spades. After that, South having discarded two Hearts on the last two Spades, West led a Heart and East ducked. South was obliged to win but subsequently lost two more tricks to the Club King and Heart King, making a total of seven for the adversaries.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

Declarer, before discarding from dummy on the third trick, should have realized that he could not make up his Clubs without losing two tricks in that suit, and that two tricks in Clubs plus four tricks in Spades would set him two. He could not expect that West would not be able to win one Club trick. His best chance for game was to drop the adverse Diamonds (which was highly probable), and to find the King of Hearts in the East hand (an even chance). He played his first six tricks correctly except that North's discard should have been a Club; and then at trick 7 he should have led the Ace and then a small Heart. East would win with the King and probably lead a Club which South could win with the Ace and put dummy in with a second Heart to cash his two long Diamonds and make game.

What Today Means to You

"SCORPIO"

IF November 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 a. m. and from 9:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m.

The stars are adverse on this date, and you will meet with underhanded opposition. Act cautiously and prove your suspicions. The a. m. hours are the best for business affairs. Financial problems face you.

The child born on this November 10 will have considerable reserve force and power, and will have a strong character. It will be self-reliant and assured, and will fight its own battles. An abruptness of speech is indicated, and considerable energy and ambition.

You have a very dynamic personality and staunch beliefs, which you are prepared to defend with a fearlessness of purpose which compels admiration from others. You fight your way through life, but not in an offensively aggressive manner. You have the traits of a good football player—courage, alertness of mind and body, the power of concentration, good sportsmanship and a controlled temper. One could picture you as a vigorous center-forward but not as a participant of "parlor tag." The blameless character of your private life, your honest principles and the sincerity of your motives are to your credit. You are more than a picturesque word-spinner, you are a whirlwind doer.

You are very business-like in all your dealings, whether it be with a friend or stranger. You have a good sense of time, and are almost never unpunctual. People with untidy habits, and who live without system or method, annoy you greatly. You will acquire very fixed habits of living which you will be very loath to break. Throughout your life, you will grapple many friends to your heart, and there will be few who will betray your loyalty and confidence. Tolerance will be an acquired trait, brought on by your own personal experiences and sorrows. You have a dry sense of humor, and as a bystander, you are often quietly amused at the world and its people. In a dignified way, you know how to enjoy life.

Successful people born November 10:

Aaron Bancroft, president of the American Unitarian Association.

James H. Roosevelt, founder of Roosevelt Hospital, New York.

Henry Van Dyke, professor of English literature, Princeton.

Isidore Singer, projector and editor "Jewish Encyclopedia."

Cincinnatus H. Miller ("Joaquin Miller"), poet.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

HIGH TEMPERATURES AND SUDDEN DRAUGHTS.

THE ideal conditions for most house plants consist of a temperature between 60 to 70 degrees during the daytime, and 50 to 55 degrees at night. It isn't always easy to maintain this temperature at night in the average house where fires are banked, but strive to keep it as near this as possible.

In the house, in order to supply our plants with the sunshine which is so necessary to their welfare, we are forced to keep them near the windows. Unless we constantly change their position by turning them a trifle each day, they are apt to develop unevenly. During their stay in the windows great care must be exercised to prevent the ends of the leaves from coming in direct contact with the glass, especially at night when they may be frozen. On very cold nights it will frequently repay us to place a layer of newspaper between the glass and the plants.

While all plants require heat and some degree of sun, they also require fresh air. Florists ventilate their houses sometimes four times a day and we must follow this plan if we are to have healthy specimens.

When a room where there are growing plants becomes too warm, the plants transpire an excessive amount of water—faster than the roots can supply it from the soil. Another phase of the question of too much heat is the fact that when plants are continually kept in a room where the temperature is abnormally high and are kept rather well watered, they become what the florists term "forced," meaning that they develop a great quantity of soft growth. And because it is soft it is easily injured. A sudden draught of air, perhaps only 10 degrees lower than the surrounding air, will chill the plant and as a result soft-wooded plants (like the geranium and heliotrope), begin to turn yellow and drop their leaves.

This is frequently the reason why the tips of the leaves of palms turn yellow. It takes a plant a long time to recover from an injury of this sort.

All rooms where there are growing plants should, if possible, have a dish of water on the radiator. Some radiators are now being made with attached containers for water. Where we have only a few plants it is well to carry them to the bathroom at least twice a week and give them a steam bath. This can easily be accomplished by turning on the hot water and thus filling the room with steam. Frequently the kitchen proves an ideal place for plants because here the steam from the cooking keeps the atmosphere sufficiently moist.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

INSULIN SUBSTITUTES.

A REPORT by Drs. Blotner and Murphy indicates some promise of a substitute for insulin and the injection method. These physicians found that taking a watery extract of liver by mouth caused the amount of sugar in the blood to fall. The fall was quite noticeable three hours after the extract was taken and it was at its limit by eight hours afterward.

The amount of extract given was equivalent to one pound of liver. The drop in blood sugar noted after this dose exceeded that produced by an injection of ten units of insulin or even more. When used on diabetics the results were satisfactory, both when given in conjunction with insulin and when that drug was not used.

Up to the time of reporting, their experience had been limited to 23 diabetics, some observed and checked very closely and others only as clinical cases are usually watched. In addition, they had done the proper amount of laboratory clinical experimentation. Of course, one swallow does not make a summer, nor can final conclusions be based on 23 cases nor on the experience of one group of physicians. No one is justified in throwing away his syringe and abandoning insulin at the present stage of the story.

There remains to be answered such questions as: Will liver extract by mouth bring a man out of a diabetic coma? Will it ward off coma? Can it be taken for a long time without losing its effect or upsetting the digestion? What is the best way to make liver extract? How can it be kept? How marketed? How often should it be used? What is the best dose? Is overdosing dangerous? What are its limitations? What age periods does it suit? What should be its relation to diet? It may be that it will replace insulin, but it is more probable that it will find a field and leave for insulin another field.

It seems to promise much for that large group of diabetics who do not know how to use insulin by hypodermic, or who do not care to learn or are indifferent to its use because of the trouble.

The internal secretions of the liver and of the pancreas have somewhat the same action. It is known that the liver has much to do with changing sugar into a form in which it can be stored and which can be used by the muscles. Therefore we do not wonder that physicians are trying to use liver extract instead of insulin.

HAVE A CAREFUL ANALYSIS.

R. E. C. writes: How can one decide whether kidney stones are oxalate, urate or alkaline?

2. In the case of arthritis are not the deposits of different nature in different people? This is important to determine in order to know what is best to eat.

REPLY.

1. By a chemical analysis of a stone. If no stone is available, repeated urinary examinations for such points as excess acidity, excess salts and for crystals will point the way.

2. Deposits of minerals in the tissues is not usual in even chronic arthritis. When such tophi happen to be present one can sometimes be removed and analyzed. They vary according to the disease.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

For another half-hour the four chatted about nothing in particular. Lady Dorothy, although she was far from psychic, was conscious of a growing tension in the atmosphere. And she was alarmed by the girl's curious moods, which she did not understand. Was the murder of her brother affecting her mind? The Gwendolen she had known in the past was so eminently sane. It was her greatest virtue. And now—Lady Dorothy felt horribly afraid.

Donald Flint had tried several times to maneuver Lady Gwendolen away from the others, but she seemed determined to keep Mr. Armstrong [illegible] she got up and took a seat on the long wicker [illegible] beside him.

"It's getting rather unpleasantly damp out here," Lady Dorothy finally observed. "I think it would be a good idea to go into the music room."

"Yes, let's!" assented Lady Gwendolen with enthusiasm. She rose and held out her hand to each of the men. "Come along!" she said, gayly, and making them trip along with her.

They had not been many minutes in the music room before Bruce Armstrong was launched again on his favorite subject of the superiority of the savage to the civilized man. Neither Donald Flint nor Lady Gwendolen was listening to him, but seemed enwrapped in each other.

Suddenly Gaspard, the butler, appeared. He did not notice the others, but went direct to Lady Gwendolen, and whispered something in her ear which the others could not catch. She started, then jumped to her feet.

"I must leave you all for a few minutes," she explained. Then, going over to her former fiance, she whispered to him: "Wait until I return."

"I may see you alone, then?" he asked in a low voice.

Lady Gwendolen nodded, but did not reply in words, and hurried from the room, leaving the others to the mercies of the explorer and his hobbies.

She hastened to the library, where she found Inspector Linscott waiting for her.

"I was already on my way when your message reached the yard," he immediately explained. "I only got it just now here. . . ." He nodded toward the telephone.

Lady Gwendolen looked nervously toward the open door. The inspector immediately closed it, and moved two chairs close together in the opposite corner. He assisted the young girl into one and seated himself in the other.

"You have discovered something important?" he asked. "I think I have, too."

"Oh, tell me," she begged nervously. "I'd much rather hear what you have learned first. . . ."

"I had an answer from Canada only today," he replied. "It states that your brother's enemy, Bruin Peters, was reported dead by a trapper named Flint. . . ."

Lady Gwendolen grasped the inspector's arm. She was so white he feared she would faint.

"Don't take it like that, Lady Gwendolen. It's nothing against Mr. Flint you know," he said soothingly. "I've spent the afternoon investigating him, and he's clear . . . was all through the war in an Australian regiment, received all kinds of decorations, and made his money quite legitimately in war speculations. . . ."

A strange twisted smile appeared on Lady Gwendolen's face.

"Is that all you learned?" she asked huskily.

"I know it isn't much," the inspector returned apologetically. "I'm trying to tie up with Willie Hanson, but so far I've had no luck. He's the smoothest fellow I ever talked to . . . yet, despite his English blood and apparent ignorance, I can't get him out of my mind."

"What became of the Mr. Flint who was with Bruin Peters . . .?" asked Lady Gwendolen.

"That's the funny part of it. The Canadian police don't seem to know. Of course, he was an honest fellow, and they had no reason for keeping track of him. . . ."

"I think I know where he is," interrupted Lady Gwendolen, softly. "He is dead. . . ."

"What!" Inspector Linscott looked at the pale girl in amazement.

"Bruin Peters killed him, too, I think. . . ."

An expression of sorrow succeeded the one of surprise. The inspector suddenly realized that Lady Gwendolen's mind was affected by her recent trouble. And no wonder! The poor girl had been through more than human nature could stand. . . .

"No, I'm not mad!" Lady Gwendolen was saying very quietly. "You'll understand when you have looked at this. . . ."

She drew from her bosom the picture at which she had been staring when Lady Dorothy interrupted her in her bedroom earlier in the evening. She held it where the inspector could see it, but without letting go of it herself.

"Do you understand now?" she asked, after a minute of silence.

"It's Donald Flint, financier, and . . ."

"And my brother, Edward," she finished the sentence for him. "See, here, on the back, it says: 'Bruin Peters and Edward Winston.' That is Edward's writing . . . he has come back from the dead to avenge himself. . . ."

"How horrible for you!" the inspector exclaimed in the first words which came to his lips, but Lady Gwendolen had not heard him. She had fainted.

The inspector was obliged to think quickly. He had learned upon his arrival that Donald Flint was a guest at Alston Manor for the evening. He now understood why Lady Gwendolen had asked him to bring help with him. She knew the man and expected resistance. It seemed likely, too, in view of the circumstance, he had to deal with a desperate French-Canadian who already apparently had three murders to his credit. Surely a few more wouldn't faze him, especially where his freedom was involved.

Yet the girl at his feet obviously needed attention, and that quickly. He hesitated a moment. Then he gently lifted the limp form and placed it in a recumbent position on a broad divan. Almost at once Lady Gwendolen opened her eyes and smiled.

"Are you all right?" he asked.

"Quite. You may leave me."

He gratefully pressed her hand and stepped hastily to the door of the music room.

"Ah, Mr. Armstrong, may I see you a minute?" he called.

"Why, inspector, I didn't know you were back!" exclaimed Lady Dorothy in surprise.

"I just came in." The inspector smiled a friendly greeting toward the financier. "And I shall keep Mr. Armstrong only a moment. I want him to clear up a point for me. Then we'll both join you. . . ."

"Where's Lady Gwendolen?" asked Lady Dorothy.

"I haven't seen her," promptly lied the inspector as he took the explorer's arm and led him away.

It did not take many seconds to explain the situation to Armstrong and to slip a loaded revolver into his pocket.

"You go back there and keep guard, while I get Lady Gwendolen into her room," he ordered the explorer. "Then I'll return with that French butler. He looks like a husky fellow. . . ."

When Inspector Linscott returned to the library Lady Gwendolen was sitting up on the divan where he had laid her and staring in front of her, like one dazed and quite unable to understand how she came to be there.

The inspector assisted her gently to her feet and helped her up the stairs. When they were in her room and she saw the heaps of snapshots on the floor it all came back to her.

As he was going the girl reached out and clasped his hand.

"May you succeed," she murmured in a broken voice.

"Courage," he returned. "You've been a brave young woman. Don't let yourself go now."

After securing the services of Gaspard, who was instructed to guard the window from the outside, Inspector Linscott returned to the music room. Mr. Flint had become uneasy during Lady Gwendolen's long absence and was walking restlessly up and down the room. Was he beginning to suspect? He surely must. For the air itself was charged with portentous happenings, fraught with fear. The explorer's deepest eyes were following every move Flint made with infinite attention. He could not help admiring the natural animal grace of the man as he paced up and down, up and down. . . . "Like a tiger!" thought Armstrong, and added, under his breath, "and just as desperate when at bay!"

"Lady Gwendolen just passed me in the hall," said the inspector, "and she asked me to have you come to her a moment, Lady Dorothy. She also asked that Mr. Flint would please wait until she could return. . . ."

"I wonder what she can want?" said Lady Dorothy with a puzzled frown. "If you'll excuse me, gentlemen, I'll go and see."

"Stay with her!" Inspector Linscott hissed into the astonished hostess' ear as she swept past him and hurried to her young guest's room.

She was nearing the top of the broad staircase, when she was startled out of her wits by hearing a shot, followed by another, and still another. Her heart stood still with fright. She could hardly crawl up the remaining stairs. Just as she reached Lady Gwendolen's door it opened and the pale, strained face of her young guest peered out.

"Did they get him?" she asked.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

GLUE AND PASTE.

(Bureau of Standards.)

The rapid drying of glue if the cover is not kept tightly in place is well known. In case of glue, however, there is not much loss of material as loss of time necessary in heating the glue again after it has dried. Library paste and similar pastes when purchased in the special glass containers made on purpose, usually have a coating of parafin over the surface to prevent the deterioration of the paste before use.

If this parrafin is wholly removed upon opening the bottle, deterioration is apt to begin over the whole surface. This can be checked by keeping the cover tightly in place when not in use and by keeping water in the special well for the brush, which will prevent the paste from drying out rapidly. If only a little paste is used at a time, losses can be checked further by cutting only a small hole through the parrafin and using the brush through the hole. This exposes less of the surface to the atmosphere and so reduces the drying process or the growth of the mold.

Modern Laundry System Excels Home Methods

Manhattan Expert Explains Net Bag System

ACTUALLY SAVES MONEY BY SAVING CLOTHES

Makes Them Look Better And Wear Longer

Present-day laundry methods, which preserve clothes as well as clean them, are far superior to the old home method of rubbing and scrubbing, according to Mr. E. F. Wesely, chief of the Research Department of Manhattan Laundry. Mr. Wesely attributes a large part of the Manhattan Laundry's success to their Net Bag System of washing.

Manhattan Laundry, long a pioneer in developing better laundering methods, adopted the Net Bag for washing clothes six years ago. Clothes, they agreed, could be washed just as clean in net bags and would wear longer if rubbing and scrubbing were eliminated. Today, Manhattan still features the Net Bag System, and the activities of the Laundry's Research Department are constantly directed toward the perfection of cleaner and safer methods of washing clothes. Manhattan Laundry justly deserves the slogan: "We Save You Money by Saving Your Clothes."

Manhattan famous Net Bag System of washing, as described by Mr. Wesely, follows: First, the clothes are assorted according to their color and material into individual net bags which bear the customer's name and contain only that customer's articles. Safe in the nets and protected from all metal or other hard surfaces, the clothes go into the washers. Here they are subject to the gentle cleansing action of swirling hot suds which penetrates every single thread of each garment and loosens every particle of dirt. Only the purest of Palm Oil soaps and soft, filtered water are used in washing, after first having been inspected and tested by the Research Department. Many rinsings of fresh, clear water follow, removing every speck of dirt from the clothes and leaving the fabrics refreshed and clean. They are then dried, starched where necessary and ironed by the most modern methods.

That clothes wear longer and look better when washed in Net Bags has been proven by test after test. For instance, two shirts, exactly the same, are washed fifty times each, one in a net bag, the other by hand. At the end of the test the net-bag washed shirt showed absolutely no signs of wear, while the hand-washed shirt had become a sad combination of rough edges, torn seams and broken buttons. Other tests on all sorts of wearing apparel are being carried on regularly and in every case show the Net Bag System to be far superior in preserving the original sheen of the cloth. At Manhattan the Nets Get the Wear and the Clothes Get the Wash.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—In Hollywood, where divorce is customary when either the husband or the wife finds the slightest dissatisfaction in the other, this case is refreshingly different:

EUGENE PALLETTE

She is a scenario writer whose earnings have been a good many thousands a year. When they were married his prospects for success as a director or executive were good. The subsequent loss of two positions through indifference made him careless and the more dependent on his wife's earnings.

For a while he refused to work, his pride hurt because his wife was so much more successful than he. Lately, through her influence, he has been given jobs befitting his station as the husband of an important writer—positions that pay fairly well but which require little work.

Instead of divorcing him, as her friends tell her she should, she is giving up her film connections on the pretext that she is tired of writing. She hopes that by subordinating herself he will recover his ambition and eventually "make something of himself."

Her affliction is commonly called love.

Secretary's Hero.

Here is another story, on the same theme, but with a different plot:

Stars at one studio are required to take care of their own fan mail, and they have secretaries, usually young women, to answer letters, autograph photographs and, of concern in this little drama, reply politely to the love letters that women write the star we're talking about.

This star's young and attractive secretary has been answering his less personal mail for two years, often writing over his signature polite but firm refusals of marriage (which he never reads) made by young, middle-aged and elderly hopefuls.

All the while she has been in love with him, but he doesn't know it.

Alibi.

Eugene Pallette and Gary Cooper, while on a location trip, tried to outdo each other bragging about their excellence at hunting. Their tales became so outlandish that other members of the company suggested they hunt for deer.

The two went out with a guide, who found the animals they were looking for. Both Pallette and Cooper fired several times, and at close range, but succeeded in doing no more than scaring the deer away.

Their alibi was that some one had substituted blanks for their real shells.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Marry the Man.

DEAR MISS McDONALD: I am a girl of 23 and have been in love with a fellow of 26 for over a year. My people do not approve of my going with him. We get along at home on all other points but this, and I can't give him up. He has no bad habits whatsoever and we never quarrel. He will do anything for me, and we plan to get married some day. No matter what I say at home, they say they know better, and I must not go with him. I've been meeting him two or three nights a week unknown to my family. Holidays are the only time I go out with him and tell them. And then I can't go alone with him. I have to take my chum and her boy friend. Do you think I'm all wrong in going against their wishes?

One reason why I don't just tell them I'm going, regardless of what they say, is that he and I both work at the same place, I in the office as bookkeeper, and he is in the shop. Mamma threatens to come down there and make a scene, and I couldn't stand the shame of that.

Please, Miss McDonald, tell me if I am wrong in standing up for him against every one. Both of us hate meeting secretly, as we never can go places, as I must be home early enough to avoid suspicion. It takes away half the joy of being with him. If you'll just tell me if you think I'm silly, and just imagine I can't give him up, or if you think I have a right to love him and marry him in a few years, I'd be very grateful to you.

VIOLET.

The sooner you break away from the tyranny you describe the better. The type of mother who would be capable of making a scene at her daughter's place of employment as a means of gaining her own way is the type that manages to make miserable the lives of her children rather than see those children live lives of their own.

Be quiet and firm. Live your own life as your mother lived hers. She probably had several children when she was your age. Have sense. Marry the man.

YOUR NAME What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFFERARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Graham" is of Scottish and English origin. Its full significance is "he who lives at the gray land or inclosure."

The family name "Overall" is of English origin. It is derived from two sources, and may mean "he who lives in the hall or mansion near the shore," or "he who lives in the hall or mansion at the corner." A certain Thomas del Overhalle is mentioned in an English document of the year 1379.

The family name "Gard" (also spelled "Garde"), is a French form of "Ward." "Ward" (also spelled "Warde"), is of English origin, and means "the watchman," or "the member of the guard." In a few cases, "Ward" may be traced back to a Celtic source meaning "The son of the poet." It is one of the commonest names in old English registers.

The family name "Brackenridge" is of English and Scandinavian origin. Its full significance is "he who lives at the fern ridge."

The family name "Bernhardt" is of German origin. It is derived from the old Germanic personal name "Berinhard," which means "bear-brave."

The family name "Landeau" is of French origin. It is a diminutive form of "Roland," which is ultimately of Teutonic origin, and which may be translated "famous land" or "fame of the land."

The family name "Calverley" is of English origin and means "he who lives at or near the calves' lea." Many families which bear this name have received it because of a former residence in the town of Calverley, near Bradford, Yorks. A certain Gilbert de Calverley is mentioned in the Hundred Rolls, and an Agnes de Calverslay is mentioned in a document of the year 1379.

"Mabel Bryan" means "Lovable Strength," "Walter Randall" means "Mighty-Army Shield-Wolf."

Abyssinian Emperor Plans Million Dollar Palace

Haile Selassie Spent Entire Personal Fortune on Coronation Ceremonies; U. S. Delegation Leaves for Return Trip Home.

Addis Ababa, Abyssinia, Nov. 9 (A. P.).—Now that the coronation ceremonies are ended and Emperor Haile Selassie I is better known to the outside world, he intends to build a sumptuous million-dollar palace on the site of the present unsightly wooden structure, believing the new building will be more in keeping with the dignity of the "King of Kings."

Since the emperor spent most of his personal fortune on the coronation, the funds for the new palace must come from the granting of concessions to foreigners, the sale of some of the emperor's vast land holdings and voluntary contributions from the people. The emperor receives no salary, and therefore is dependent for income upon customs revenues and levies on tribal chieftains.

The American delegation to the coronation left here today, tired but exhilarated by three weeks of festivities attending the splendid and barbaric ceremonies which marked the great Abyssinian event.

The Americans left for Djibouti, where they will board the liner General Duchesne November 11 for Port Said. After ten days in Egypt they will start for New York by way of Marseilles.

The chief delegates, H. Murray Jacoby and Gen. W. W. Harts, and their wives, said their stay in Abyssinia was the most wonderful experience of their lives. They were the recipients of marked courtesy on the part of the emperor, who received them in special farewell audiences.

Another American, Burton Holmes, motion picture lecturer and travel authority, received unusual honors. Haile Selassie presented him a magnificent national Ethiopian costume and also decorated him with the Order of Menelik II.

The German, Swedish, Egyptian, Dutch, Turkish and French delegations also left today, but the Duke of Gloucester's British party will remain three weeks longer for a lion hunt and the Italians will leave November 12.

One interesting feature of the coronation festivities last week was the situation brought about by the wife of a certain foreign diplomat, who questioned whether a German midwife, who had advanced to the position of principal lady in waiting to the Ethiopian empress, had the right to sit a dinner with the foreign Diplomatic Corps.

So difficult was the problem that the foreign corps held a special meeting and decided that Frieda Haetel, the midwife and lady in waiting in question, had a right to sit with the foreign diplomats if in the presence of the empress, but was not of sufficient social standing to be invited to dinners and other functions at foreign legations.

The incident at one time threatened to disrupt the coronation festivities, but was solved before news of it reached the emperor's ears. The German woman came to Abyssinia many years ago and is considered the most powerful person in the entourage of the empress.

CALF-PATH
a not-too-serious analogy

Speaking of wasteful methods of doing business, reminds us of Sam Foss's famous poem, "The Calf-Path." A few selected lines explain what we mean:

One day, through a primeval wood,
A calf walked home as good calves should;
And left a trail all bent askew,
A crooked trail as all calves do.

And from that day, o'er hill and glade
Through those old woods a path was made;
And many men wound in and out,
And dodged, and turned, and bent about
And uttered words of righteous wrath
Because 'twas such a crooked path

The years passed on in swiftness fleet,
The path became a village street;
And this, before men were aware,
A city's crowded thoroughfare;
And men two centuries and a half
Trod in the footsteps of that calf.

A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf near three centuries dead...
For thus such reverence is lent.
To well-established precedent.

Excerpts from The Calf-Path by Sam. W. Foss

FISHER SUGGESTS MORATORIUM AS CURE FOR ILLS OF WORLD

Universal Cancellation Of War Debts Is Urged

Professor Advocates Commission to Arrange Settlements Which Would Include U. S.—Boon to Business Recovery Is Seen—Gold Too Scarce.

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.
Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 9.—The sailing for Europe of George E. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, to engage in discussions with the heads of the Bank of England, Bank of France and the Reichsbank is heralded as part of an effort to solve the problems arising out of the current world-wide business depression. Into this discussion, no doubt, there will be projected the question of the apprehended gold shortage for carrying on the world's business.

Debt payments and trade barriers have resulted in a concentration of too much gold in a few countries, not enough in the rest. The gold committee of the League of Nations has reported that probably during the next decade there will not be gold enough mined to keep up with the expanding needs of trade. The accompanying chart, based partly on estimates by J. Kitchin and partly on the estimate of the gold committee, tells the story of expected shortage after 1934, supposing the present legal requirement for reserves and the present methods of economizing monetary gold remain unchanged.

Calls for Drastic Action.

Certainly the situation calls for drastic and far-reaching action. The miseries of unemployment have visited this rich country. Unemployment has long afflicted the industrialized nations of Europe, and it has spread, with its attendant hardships around the globe. In Austria the roll of jobless men is rising; in Australia the tale of bankruptcies continues to increase. In India, China and Malaya business paralysis and famine have come from the same general causes which threaten to bring bankruptcy to the British and German systems of unemployment insurance.

The Manchester Chamber of Commerce, in its appeal to Parliament, lays the hard times in England to a resumption of the gold standard during a time when gold for expanding business was especially hard to get and boldly asks that this time honored monetary standard be discarded. Only the other day Dr. Robert Eisler, in an address in Vienna, made a plea that the gold standard be abandoned for a scheme of universal currency expansion to meet the growing needs of industry and to maintain a stable price level.

Of course, a concerted lowering of requirements for gold reserves, and the making of the new bank for international settlements more and more a central clearing house for the world's banking systems, would postpone the menace of a gold shortage due to slackening production of the mines.

Should Drop Trade Barriers.

But additional measures are needed. The trade barriers, higher tariffs, and other reprisals bringing threats of war, must be done away with. These barriers prevent the free flow of gold credits between nations. The debt payments require Europe to pay us more and more gold or goods year after year. We have already absorbed nearly one-half of the monetary gold stock of the world and we inhibit, if not prohibit, payment in goods. Further, these payments are tied in with the indemnity claims of the allies upon Germany.

With respect to German reparations, these were originally imposed on the theory that Germany alone was responsible for the war. Now the historical records show that war guilt must be shared by most of the nations engaged in the war. The peace settlement, based ostensibly on principles of right, was largely made by might. A popular interpretation of all this historical criticism is the book entitled "Alias Uncle Shylock," by Herbert W. Fisher.

Consent to the imposing of a war indemnity upon Germany was doubtless excusable on the part of President Wilson and others at the time, because they sincerely believed that Germany had the whole responsibility for the war. Since practically all of those engaged were guilty, mutual cancellation of debts seems in order.

Wiping out war debts would get us out of the anomalous position of having renounced war by the Kellogg treaties and still exercising the victor's right to the spoils of war taken from the one supposed culprit, Germany. Surely it is time to substitute, in fact as well as in name, the principle of right instead of might, the principle of judicial settlements of war claims. It would also be more in accordance with the underlying intentions of President Wilson at the peace conference, to have this whole matter reconsidered from the very foundation by means of a special judicial commission appointed for the purpose.

Would Aid Price Restoration.

Pending the report of such a commission, which would take undoubtedly at least a year, a moratorium on reparation payments, already granted by the Young plan at Germany's discretion, would aid the effort for a restoration of world price levels. Such a moratorium should be proclaimed with the hearty cooperation of the allies and of the United States. The United States should extend the moratorium to our European debtors.

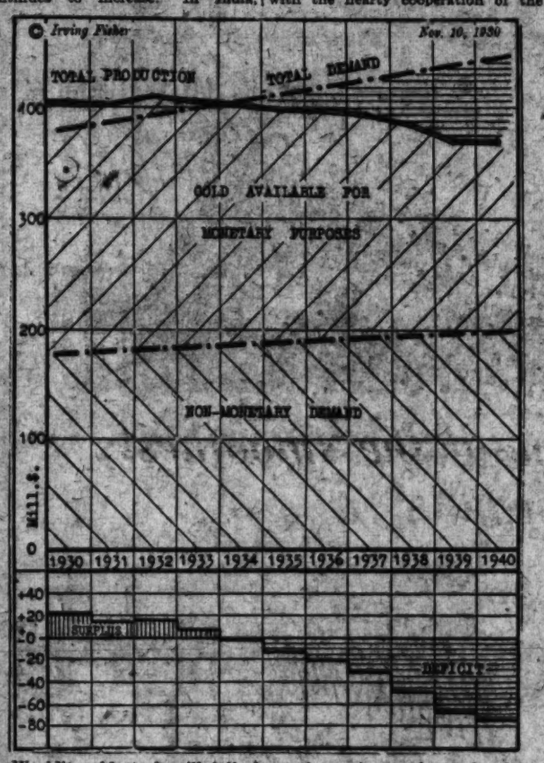
The suggested commission should have the right accorded by the peace treaty to rearrange all international settlements, not only German reparations but the debts to the United States. The Young plan foreshadows this. Coming generations will always be restive under an injustice committed by their fathers. They will doubtless repudiate the enormous debts burden if they believe that the contract for their payment was wrongfully imposed.

A universal debt cancellation, if it could be proclaimed, would be the greatest possible boon in promoting economic recovery which the world so sorely needs. Even the creditor nations do not want the imports from the debtor nations, which are necessary to pay the debts, and they are trying to ward them off by higher tariffs. It would be far simpler and sounder to accomplish the same purpose by canceling the debts.

That would simplify the problem of establishing reciprocal trade relations mutually advantageous to the leading nations. By promoting concord, it would enable them more quickly to get together for an understanding upon their monetary needs. They are now learning the bitter lesson that mutual exclusiveness in trade, the massing of gold into sterilized reserves, spells universal business stagnation. It spreads misery and mutiny within all nations. Europe bitterly denounces "Uncle Sam" as "Uncle Shylock."

Is not the friendly good will of these nations worth more to us than twelve billion dollars of debts which irritate and which almost certainly will never be paid in full?

(Copyright, 1930.)



World's gold stock will fall short of growing trade needs after 1934, if present rules for its use are retained. Estimates by J. Kitchin and gold committee of League of Nations.

STOCK PRICE SLUMP HITS ALL OF GROUPS

New Lows for Year Reached by Entire List; Average of Index Near 1926.

UTILITY TRADING IS UP

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service).

At last week's close the Irving Fisher index of common industrial stocks on the New York Stock Exchange had dropped to 100.1, with a net loss last week of 4.5 per cent. The decline was resumed on October 29, following a period of eight sessions when prices showed marked resistance to further declines; it has lasted for eight sessions, with a total loss of 9.5 per cent at last week's close. During this period the industrial index has dropped off at an average daily rate of 1.2 per cent, with last week's closing market the weakest day in the decline.

No group was spared in this price recession, and all the groups closed last week at the low for the year. The auto accessories group showed the least resistance, closing last week off by 2.5 per cent from the preceding week's close. The groups of building supplies, electrical equipment, motors, office equipment, radio and theaters and utilities showed a more acute rate of decline last week than did the all-industrial index. Farm machinery, foods and oils showed greatest resistance.

The chemical group dropped below its low in the November, 1929, crash. The tobacco and electrical equipment groups alone succeeded in holding their levels above their 1929 lows; building supplies, office equipment and utilities suffered the sharpest break since October 29, showing losses at last week's close from their October lows of over 8 per cent.

Values Steady; Utilities Up.

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange held steady last week, with the average daily value of tradings in common industrial stocks at $73,000,000, a 5 per cent drop from the preceding week. Due to a rise of $5,400,000 in the daily tradings of public utility stocks, the all-stocks values rose by 2 per cent to $98,300,000.

Twelve of the groups rose in tradings last week, with the chemicals and utilities groups alone showing gains of over $1,000,000 each. The groups that continued to show lower tradings dropped by larger amounts, with the miscellaneous, agricultural products, radio, stores and coppers groups each off by more than $1,000,000.

Paris Stocks Below 1926.

Stock price levels in Paris and Berlin continued to drop last week, with the index for Paris off by 6.1 per cent to 95.6, the record low, and 4 per cent below the previous low of 100.0, equal to 1926 average, made in the week ended October 17. Price levels in Berlin did not take a sharp drop, but continued to ease off at approximately the rate of the preceding week of 2 per cent.

Conditions in the London market seem better, with the stock price index indicating rising levels now for three consecutive weeks. Last week's gain of 1.5 per cent brought the level to 66.2, a 4.4 per cent gain over the recent low of 63.4, made in the week ended October 17.

Investments Hold Up Best.

The investment group of stocks showed best resistance in the depressed market last week, dropping off from the preceding week's close by 3.9 per cent. Semiinvestment stocks closed last week off by 5 per cent, and speculative stocks led the decline with a loss over the week of 5.8 per cent.

Each of the graded group indexes at last week's close was the low for this year with a drop from their previous lows on October 22 of 4 per cent in the investment and semiinvestment groups and 5 per cent in the speculative group.

It is noteworthy that speculative stocks have suffered the worst break since the June low, showing a loss at last week's close of 30 per cent, while semiinvestment stocks have dropped by 23 per cent and investment stocks by 14 per cent.

Capital Is Required For Applied Knowledge

Knowledge, to be of use in trade, must be applied, and its application usually requires the aid of capital. The greater and more productive the stock of capital in any community, the more goods it can put into the currents of trade.

A mill will make a town a center of trade. Docks, elevators, warehouses, and railway terminals help transform a harbor into a port of commerce.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM

Gardner; Fisk.

J. M. S.—I have been advised to buy Gardner Motors and Fisk Rubber. What is your opinion of them?

Answer—Both stocks should be avoided. Gardner is carrying on business at a loss, and there are no definite signs yet of any improvement. Gardner is a small producer with limited financial resources. As such it is busy at this time in limiting losses while awaiting better times for the automobile industry. Even in good years, Gardner has never done well enough to inspire confidence in the stock, which pays nothing and is a sheer speculation.

For the first six months this year, Fisk Rubber reported a loss of $2,851,902, including a write-down of $1,854,902 inventory loss on crude rubber. Fisk has felt the effect of stiffening competition in the industry, and there appears no ray of hope for its long depressed securities. The stock is a hazardous speculation.

Ludlum Steel.

H. F. U.—What is your opinion of Ludlum Steel? Can you tell me how the earnings are running?

Answer—Earnings have been hit by the reduced operations in the automobile and machine tool lines. A loss of $95,422 was reported by Ludlum Steel for the first six months this year. The deficit compares with $3.26 a share earned in the first six months of 1929.

While the remaining months of 1930 may show some improvement over the first half, profits for the twelve months are not expected to approach those of last year, when $3.60 a share was reported. Dividends are $2 a share, and cash, as of December 31, last, amounted to only $318,474.

Zonite.

G. M.—I am a stockholder in Zonite Products. Please give me some information about the stock and the recent financing.

Answer—If directors see fit to maintain the $1 yearly dividend rate, the recent stock offering to shareholders at $10 a share looks like an expensive undertaking. Zonite will be paying, in effect, 10 per cent for money with which to wipe out bank loans and increase working capital. This 10 per cent levy compares with a current money market rate of about 2 per cent.

It is thought, however, that the company is in good shape now, and it is estimated that net income for 1930 will just about cover dividend requirements. The company turns out drug store products, and facilities are now being operated at capacity. The stock, however, must be classed as rather speculative.

BONDS REACH PEAK, THEN MOVE DOWN

Index Sharply Breaks at Close of Week; Government Issues Firm.

TRADING WAS STEADY

The upswing of bond price levels that followed the bottom of the recent recession carried the in dex of all bonds to 100.8 on November 8, to show a gain of 0.19 per cent over the low on October 24. Following this peak, bond prices suffered a sharp turn, closing last week off by 0.23 per cent from the week's high, and establishing a new low since the year's high with a net loss last week of 0.17 per cent.

Trading in bonds on the New York Stock Exchange was steady last week, at the average level obtaining prior the active trading period that accompanied the recent break in bond prices.

The group index, with the exception of Government groups, moved in line with the index of all bonds. All of the group indexes closed off last week with second-grade rails displaying the greatest weakness, closing the week at 98.7, the year's low, with a net loss over the week of 0.54 per cent. This group followed the trend of all bonds with a gain of 0.3 per cent from October 30 to November 8, closing the week with the heaviest loss of 0.6 per cent from the week's high.

The remaining groups, at last week's close, showed gains over their lows of two weeks ago with the utility group showing the most strength, holding at 103.1, a gain of 0.3 per cent over the October 24 low. In the recent rally, industrial bonds rose by 0.5 per cent, and utility and first-grade rail bonds by 0.4 per cent, from their respective lows. The break saw first-grade rails drop by 0.4 per cent from the week's high to the close, industrial bonds by 0.5 per cent and utility bonds by 0.1 per cent.

Foreign government bonds held a downward trend all week, showing a loss over the week of 0.12 per cent as trading held steady. U. S. Government issues were steady, following the preceding week's gain of 0.2 per cent, and on Thursday equaled the year's high of 101.6, which was recorded September 30.

COMMODITY PRICE INDEX AT NEW LOW

Purchasing Power of Dollar Reaches High of 121.7, an Increase.

FOREIGN PRICES SAG

The Irving Fisher wholesale commodity index last week dropped below the level of October 4 by 0.1 of an index point, with the price level off by 0.24 per cent. From the October 4 low of 82.3, commodity price levels jumped by 0.73 per cent during the week ended October 11. From October 11 to date, commodity price levels have suffered a gradual decline, which in four weeks has discounted the gains of October 11 and established a new low.

Since August 23 the index of commodity prices shows two major movements; the high for the period of eleven weeks was made as the first movement during the week ended September 20. Each low has been slightly under the previous low, and the second high was under the September 20 level, indicating a slow decline over the entire period. Prices fluctuated between 83.6 and 82.3.

The purchasing power of the dollar reached a new high of 121.7 last week, showing an increase of 0.33 per cent over the preceding week.

Foreign Commodity Prices Sag.

Foreign commodity markets showed weaker price levels last week, following the sharp rise of the preceding week. The London index dropped by 0.14 per cent. The French market was the weak spot in Europe, the index off by 0.51 per cent, after a gain of 1.03 per cent the preceding week. German commodity price levels continued to maintain a slowly rising trend with a gain of 0.22 per cent last week, following the sharp rise of 1.33 per cent of the preceding week.

Raw Materials Prices Weaken.

As the index of all-commodities dropped to a new low last week the semimanufactured, agricultural, farm products and building materials groups proved to be the weakest spots.

Raw materials have exhibited increasing weakness in prices during the past four weeks, culminating in last week's drop of 1.23 per cent. Semimanufactured goods continued to show fluctuating price levels, with the trend declining slowly. Finished products rose by 0.06 per cent last week to the level of October 4, having advanced by 0.5 per cent during the last two weeks.

Farm Products Weaken.

The agricultural products division revealed increasing weakness in prices, with the farm products group off by 0.7 per cent last week and foodstuffs steady. Hogs, apples, lambs, corn, oats, wheat, cotton, flour, coffee and butter were responsible for the 1 per cent drop in agricultural products.

Nonagricultural prices were off last week, the index dropping by 0.37 per cent, compared with no change the preceding week. Hides, leathers, silk, burlap, jute, petroleum, tin, turpentine and rosin were responsible for the decline in the nonagricultural groups. The hides and leather index was off by 2.7 per cent, textiles by 0.3 per cent, fuel and lighting by 1.0 per cent and building materials by 0.1 per cent. Metals, chemicals and miscellaneous products made slight gains.

Human Wants Keep Business in Motion

Human wants are, as it were, the mainsprings of economic activity, which, in the last analysis, keep the economic world in motion. The desire to have clothes as fine as the clothes of others, or finer, or different, leads to the multiplicity of silks, satins, laces, &c., and the same principle applies to furniture, amusements, books, works of art, and every other means of gratification. The increase of wants, in so far as it leads to an increase in trade, tends to lower the price level.

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Municipal bond issues scheduled for award this week amount to $31,256,886, compared with offerings of $17,333,000 in this group last week. The largest issue to be placed is $12,500,000 Chicago Board of Education scheduled for Friday. Another large issue is $2,800,000 Milwaukee County 4½ per cent courthouse bonds, to be awarded Monday.

An unmistakable revival of buying activity in the Nation's electrical equipment markets was apparent during the past week in widespread reports of heavier commitments and a stronger flow of inquiries, Electrical World reports. With sales being reported in virtually every section of the United States, the recovery seems the more marked in view of the long period of dullness which has had the industry in its grip, the publication adds.

American Department Stores Corporation reported October sales of $939,736, an increase of 2.5 per cent over figures for October last year. Total sales from February 1 to October 31 amounted to $7,980,077, a decrease of 3.5 per cent from the corresponding period last year.

Michigan Steel Corporation has completed its program of plant expansion and rearrangement at its mill at Ecorse, Mich. The company stated that with the new units in operation it has not only increased its productive capacity more than 50 per cent, but has developed a flexibility of output that will enable it to diversify its operations substantially.

Knowledge Stimulates Trade.

"Knowledge is one of the chief stimulators of trade. For instance, mines of Africa and Australia were left unworked for centuries by ignorant natives, but were opened by white men possessing a knowledge of metallurgy.

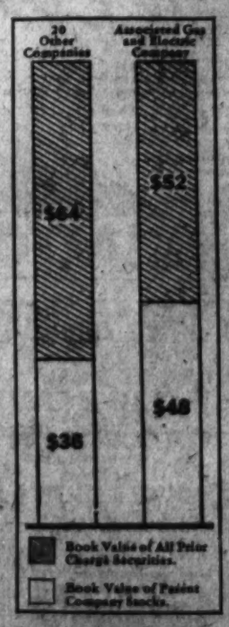
HOW TO RECOGNIZE A GOOD UTILITY BOND
No. 4 of a series of advertisements
THE ROOT OF THE TREE
33% Larger Equity
AN IMPORTANT consideration in judging the worth of a public utility investment or holding company debenture bond is the value of equity in relation to total prior charge obligations. It is as important as roots to a tree.
Associated Gas and Electric Company bond holders enjoy a greater measure of protection than is afforded by the average public utility bond. Taking equity and all prior obligations as 100, a careful analysis shows $48 of equity for Associated bonds compared with $36 of equity for bonds of other utilities.
This 33% larger equity for Associated bonds is one of several factors establishing the more than average safety of these bonds.
The analysis, comprising tests used by banks, insurance companies and investment banking houses for determining the value of utility bonds, includes the following factors which were applied to Associated bonds and bonds of 20 other public utilities:
1. Overall Earnings
2. Prior Charge Obligations
3. Equity
4. Price and Yield
5. Sources of Earnings
6. Revenue per Customer
The strong equity position of Associated bonds is further heightened by the larger earnings in relation to interest requirements. On an "overall" basis the earnings are 2.22 times the amount required for interest compared with an average of 2.06 times for the comparable bonds.



A copy of our analysis, consisting of 10 plate charts and complete explanation, may be obtained by writing for Folder K 123.

GAME WARDENS KILL YOUTH; WOUND TWO

Three Brothers Said to Have Resisted Arrest for Sunday Hunting.

SELF-DEFENSE CLAIMED

Charden, Ohio, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Richard Hannah, 18, was shot to death; his brother, George, 22, was shot and wounded, and another brother, James, 28, was captured while resisting arrest for violating the law prohibiting Sunday hunting, County Game Warden A. T. Davis said late today. The Hannahs live in Cleveland.

Davis said he and Constable Charles Meredith, of Huntsburg, attempted to arrest the brothers, who argued and resisted as they retreated a quarter mile to their father's farm. Then, Davis said, the Hannahs declared, "Now we've got you where we want you; we're going to finish you."

George thereupon attacked Davis, knocked his rifle from his hands and picked it up and fired at the warden. Davis responded with a revolver bullet through the shoulder, he said. Meanwhile, Richard overpowered Meredith, but was shot during the melee, dying instantly from a bullet through the heart, Davis said. James then surrendered. The officers declined to say who shot Richard.

James is in county jail and George is in a local hospital under guard. He is expected to recover.

The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

Attention: Mr. Ernest Johnston

My Dear Mr. Johnston:

The opening of our Virginia Shop at the University of Virginia on September 15, marked the beginning of our expansion progress of College Shops. It is indeed a most interesting and gratifying to note that less than a year ago, we opened this Washington store, and while the country has been going through a period of backward business, the Saltz Brotner's Store reached its year's quota in less than eight months, which in retail circles is considered quite extraordinary.

In opening this shop here, we brought to the City of Washington, the finest merchandise which can be obtained in the American and Foreign Markets, both as to style and quality. We felt Washington people needed just such a store. It was our desire to fill this need and so this store was opened. We now nad to bring this to the attention of the Washington public, and the fact that this store has been so successful, and patronized by the finest clientele, is due in a great measure to the fact that the Washington Post carried our printed message to these people in their homes and offices. We, therefore, write you in grateful acknowledgment of what we feel your valuable paper has done for this store.

After mature deliberation, and careful consideration, relative to future contracts for newspaper space, we have decided to use only the Washington Post, and we are signing contracts for the coming year, with your paper only. With best wishes,

Yours very truly,

SALTZ BROTHERS INC.

Reaching the People Who Do Most of the BUYING

The secret of advertising success does not rest in circulation numbers, but in the proportion of those numbers, who, because of taste and buying capacity, are most responsive to sales messages . . . The Washington Post does not claim to have the largest circulation of Washington newspapers, but the fact has been proved that it DOES have the highest percentage of readers among income groups of $3,000 per year and up and the smallest number of readers in income groups below $1,000 . . . The Post therefore gives greatest concentration on "the people who do most of the buying in Washington stores" . . . The Post type of reader is a logical prospect for any merchandise—he must buy the necessities common to every family, and he is able to buy many things that are beyond the reach of smaller incomes. Since more than half of the families in the Washington area have incomes exceeding $3,000 per year, they provide a market that cannot be neglected and that is worth concentrating upon . . . as Saltz Brothers, among others, have discovered.

MAN ADMITS GUILT AS RELIGIOUS RITE

Swavely, Held in Burning of Woman While She Slept, Prays Over Act.

SECOND WIFE RELEASED

Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 9 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Howard Swavely, 55, who, according to police, confessed Saturday to killing his wife by setting fire to her clothing as she slept, made a religious ceremony of his confession, they said. As he dictated the statement of his guilt, he fell on his knees, clasped his hands and cried:

"Lord, save my soul and help these boys who are leading me aright."

According to the confession, Swavely said the idea of killing his wife came to him as he lay awake by her side in their room early Friday morning. He got up, set fire to her clothing on a chair and watched the flames creep toward her side of the bed. When her nightgown caught fire and she awoke, the confession said, he pushed her between two blazing chairs into the mass of the fire. She died several hours later in a hospital.

Body Secretly Buried.

It was disclosed today that Mrs. Swavely's body had been claimed by her sister, Mrs. Catherine Merrity, and had been secretly buried Saturday in Holy Name Cemetery, Jersey City. This was revealed by the undertaker who took charge of the body. The undertaker did not reveal who ordered him to bury the body so quickly.

Another relative of Swavely also appeared today. He is a son of 21 who now bears the name of Robert Greffenberger and lives with his foster parents in Flushing, Queens, N. Y. He is the son of Swavely's first wife, the police say, and took the name of the people who adopted him when his mother died in Newport News, Va., in 1911.

The second wife of Swavely arrived in Jersey City Saturday. She is Mrs. Linney C. Swavely, of Philadelphia. She told the police a story, substantiated by the Philadelphia authorities, that Swavely in 1920 hired a man to kill her, but after entering her home lost his nerve and confessed the plot. Swavely was sentenced to the county prison in Philadelphia for eighteen months. He served thirteen months and was then paroled.

Woman Is Released.

This woman was released by the Jersey City police today in the custody of the superintendent of police of Philadelphia on her promise to appear in Jersey City when and if wanted.

She was married to Swavely in Los Angeles in 1912 and lived with him until his attempt on her life. She said today she had not seen him since he was sent to prison and had never gotten a divorce. Swavely, however, said he had procured a divorce from her in Los Angeles in 1928.

Mrs. Linney Swavely told the police she had heard Swavely had two wives before he married her, but Swavely insisted there had been only one, who had died in Newport News.

Church Gets Bible Missing 60 Years

Was Taken as Souvenir From Old Pohick by Union Soldiers.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 9.—After more than 60 years a Bible of Old Pohick Church, near Alexandria, Va., which was taken as a souvenir by a Northern soldier during the Civil War, has been returned to the church. The Bible was found by Dr. Packard, former dean of the Virginia Theological Seminary, near Alexandria, in the library of which it had been held for several years.

Shortly after restoration of the church was completed, in 1917, an unsuccessful effort was made to have the Bible returned to the church, but the matter was dropped until recently, when the request of the church for the return of the Bible was granted and it was turned over to the vestry.

One of the most interesting things in the book besides its own history is the change in prayers made by some patriotic revolutionary minister, who carefully purged the book of the prayers for the royal family and other un-American prayers. The volume will be sent to the Library of Congress to be rebound and then placed on exhibition with the other colonial relics of the old church, which will celebrate its two hundredth anniversary in 1932.

Princely Writ to Note Birth to Maharanee

St. Germain-en-Laye, France, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—A princely birth certificate will record the entry upon earth of the little Princess Sita Raje Holkar, born last Thursday to the former Nancy Ann Miller, of Seattle, who now is the Maharanee of Indore.

The certificate, elaborately inscribed and inclosed between silk covers, will join the armorial bearings of the Maharajah of Indore, consisting of a crown surmounted by an interrogation point, with those of St. Germain-en-Laye. The latter contains a small cradle, which commemorates the birth of Louis XIV at St. Germain in 1638.

Two Men Killed As Boat Blows Up

Gasoline Drums Explode; Bodies Are Recovered by Coast Guard.

Biloxi, Miss., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Ed Adolphsen, 50, and Conrad Hahn, 35, Biloxi fishermen, were instantly killed today from an explosion on their trawl boat Chiquita, which blew up off Breton Island. Several drums of gasoline exploding just after one of the men entered the cabin to make coffee destroyed the Chiquita just as it was preparing to leave on the day's fishing excursion.

One of the crew of the Coast Guard boats, which was anchored about 200 feet from the trawler, saw the blast, and two Coast Guardsmen, under orders from O. S. B. Oteson, in charge of the Coast Guard 300, rowed to the scene of the wreck and succeeded in recovering the bodies of the fishermen after a search of fifteen minutes.

The strength of the explosion was sufficient to rock the Coast Guard boat and a small fishing vessel that was tied up nearby.

Man Kills Wife, Self; Blames Stepdaughter

New Athens, Ill., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Ferdinand W. Fries, 65, cashier of the State Bank of New Athens, today shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Tillie Marie Fries, 46, and then committed suicide by shooting himself. He left a note blaming his wife's 15-year-old daughter, Thelma Elrick, for trouble between himself and Mrs. Fries.

The girl found the bodies after she had been attracted to the basement of the Fries home by shots. Mrs. Fries, the banker's second wife, was reputed to be wealthy.

SHOREY'S 76 WINS IN GOLF CHAMPIONS' TOURNEY

Irvington 3-0 Victor Over Apaches

Hamilton's Dropkick Decisive; Ex-Navy Pair Shines.

Passes Keep Apaches on Defense Most of Contest.

AFTER some of the best forward passing seen this season at Griffith Stadium had failed to bring a touchdown, Tom Hamilton, former Navy star, dropped back to the Apache 20-yard line and sent a drop-kick twisting over the goal post. The ball had plenty of carry but was barely inside the south post.

However, the kick represented the points which served to give the Irvington A. C. eleven a 3 to 0 victory over the Apaches before the largest sandlot crowd of the season.

The defeat was the first of the season for the Apaches and one of the few setbacks suffered by the District champions in recent years.

Hamilton's kick came on the first play of the fourth period after the Baltimoreans had been on the verge of carrying the ball across the Apache goal line on several occasions.

The passing combination of Hamilton and Moret, which once turned back Georgetown for the Middies, was a thorn in the side of the Apaches throughout the game. These two giant gridmen repeatedly carried Irvington down the field, with Hamilton firing the ball like a bullet, waist high, to Morret.

Half-Time Gun Halts Drive.

The half-time gun stopped one drive with a foot to go and a rallying Apache defense put the brakes on several others.

Aside from their inability to cope with the Irvington sensational passing, the Apaches put up a creditable exhibition. They made several scoring bids in their own right with a pass grounded over the goal line ending a promising chance to snatch the game out of the fire in the closing minutes.

Ty Rauber played the entire game at quarter and his kicking was on a par with that of Hamilton. Rauber, returning to the Apaches after two seasons, failed to get going in his usual driving style but his tackling as safety man was one of the defensive features of the game.

The Apaches appeared to be on the way to a touchdown soon after the start of the game. Hudak and McKann did the principal gaining in a drive that carried the ball to Irvington's 25-yard line, but a 15-yard penalty ended the advance.

Hamilton and Moret got to work with a vengeance in the second period, completing a pair of 20-yard gains which carried the ball well into Apache territory. A 15-yard penalty turned Irvington back but the Baltimore club came forward again soon after. The former Middies connected again and, with the ball on the Apache 10-yard line, Happy Enright, Washington boy with the visitors, began a sprint around the end which had all the earmarks of a touchdown.

Slips On 1-Foot Line.

He was partly tackled near the goal line and slipped to fall a foot from a score. At this point the gun for the half sounded.

Rauber kicked outside on the 50-yard line to give Irvington another scoring chance in the third period. The visitors advanced the ball to the 10-yard line. This time a poor pass

Cards Stop Friedman, But Giants Win, 13-7

Chicago, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The Chicago Cardinals broke up Bennie Friedman's passing attack, but couldn't stop the plunging of Moran and took a 13-to-7 beating from the New York Giants at Comiskey Park today.

The Cards scored in the second period on a pass from Ernie Nevers to Boyd, but the Giants came back for two touchdowns in the following session, to clinch the decision. Hagerty dashed 60 yards after taking a lateral from Moran, and the latter led a 70-yard parade over the Card goal a few minutes later.

Green Bay Pros Win From Chicago Bears

Chicago, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The Green Bay Packers, champions of the National Professional Football League, preserved their unmarred record for the season today by the margin of a point after touchdown, which gave them a 13-to-12 victory over the Chicago Bears.

The battle was the toughest of the season for the Packers, and Johnny Blood's place-kick after their second touchdown, gave them victory.

Blood and Pewellen scored the Packers' touchdowns while Sternaman and Brumbaugh counted for the Bears.

"Four Horsemen" Play Again in Charity Game

Philadelphia, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The famed "Four Horsemen of Notre Dame" may ride again across the gridiron—this time for charity.

The offer to have the famous back field quartet don football armor and again play for the relief of the unemployed was made to Mayor Walker of New York by Knute Rockne, Notre Dame coach.

Rockne made the offer between halves of the Notre Dame-Pennsylvania game, when Mayor Walker sought some information about a game for charity.

"I'll get Stuhldreher, Crowley, Layden and Miller," said Rockne, "and what's more, I'll coach 'em, too, although most of them are coaches now and know more than the old man."

"Will they be in shape to play?" asked the mayor.

"Sure," said Rockne. "They're always fit."

Dodgers Trounce Minneapolis, 34-0

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Led by Stumpy Thomason, the Brooklyn Dodgers inflicted a crushing defeat on the Minneapolis Red Jackets in a National League football game today. The final score was 34 to 0.

Thomason scored two of the Brooklyn touchdowns and Jack McBride, Bill Kelly and Jim Miller one each. Mike Stramiello added three of the extra points and McBride one.

Minneapolis threatened only once. In the final period Herb Joesting, Red Jacket full back, got around the Brooklyn end for a 23-yard run to the 7-yard mark. Hagerty intercepted a pass to end the threat.

Macaluso has a total of 106 points, while his nearest rival, Goff, of Rhode Island, who jumped into second place by tallying 30 points Saturday, has 86 to his credit. Bart Viviano, of Cornell, and Jack Grossman, of Rutgers, are tied for third, at 84.

CLEAN SLATE FOR W. MD., FORDHAM

Pair Only Unbeaten, Untied Elevens of East.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Fordham and Western Maryland remain at the peak of Eastern football today as the only undefeated and untied teams in the sector after last Saturday's games. Two more—Dartmouth and Army—have not yet suffered defeat, but each has been tied once.

The battering rams of Fordham have a fair claim to the highest honors so far. They have won seven straight games. Only Geneva, in the East, has scored as many victories, and the little Pennsyl

PIMLICO RACE MEETING ENTERS ITS FINAL WEEK

Three Stakes Of $10,000 Listed

Features on Program Tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

Whitney Victory in Futurity Highlight of Meet.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Md., Nov. 9.—The Maryland Jockey Club's Pimlico meeting begins its last week tomorrow, ending Saturday. The offerings for the week will include six stakes, three of which are of $10,000 added value. The schedule is: Monday, Pimlico Homebred; Tuesday, the $10,000 Bowie; Wednesday, Pimlico Graded Handicaps; Thursday, Master of Foxhounds Steeplechase; Friday, Walden Handicap, 2-year-olds, $10,000; Saturday, Pimlico Cup, $10,000; 2¼ miles.

The highlight of the Pimlico meeting so far, of course, has been the Futurity, which carried with it an unusual degree of sentiment, revolving about the entry of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney into the sport of racing, assuring the public, which treasured the silks of the late Harry Payne Whitney so highly, that the blue and brown cap, which has always stood for uprightness on the turf, would be continued in racing by the son of the New York sportsman.

Lorillard, Belmont Colors Lost to Turf.

The colors of Pierre Lorillard, when they were lost to the turf, closed a bright era in racing; the passing of the Belmont colors at the death of August Belmont was another severe blow, as has been the passing of other noted insignias of the great stables, like John E. Madden's racing interests, which passed to his son, the larger racing interests of Mr. Whitney will survive.

It was a good start that young Whitney made at Pimlico last Wednesday, when Equipoise won the rich Futurity, placing that colt at the head of the list of money winners of the 2-year-old division, and it was a sporting thing for "Sonny" Whitney to say just before the running to his relative, whose family had the contender in the stake, that, "win or lose this race, I will not be discouraged, but will carry on."

It was a close and exciting race. Equipoise came from nowhere to win, and as popular as are the Greentree colors carried by Twenty Grand. It seemed the overwhelming sentiment was for the blue and brown. The demonstration after the race was never equaled at Pimlico, and forces superior to Jockey Workman seemed to guide the son of Pennant and Swinging. It is said that it was among the last requests of H. P. Whitney that his turf activities be carried on; at least, this was handed about at Pimlico, and that he had expressed the specific desire for Equipoise to start in the Futurity, and the sentiment was crystallized for a Whitney victory.

Allanah Powerful Horse, But Never Wins.

Faith in a horse was recently exemplified in a high degree. J. Brooks trains an old maiden gelding named Allanah and he was thrown into a cheap all-aged race for maidens. Tips always fly on Allanah, but he never delivers. Admiral Grayson, on the day Allanah was to start, hunted up Brooks, just for curiosity to know the reason of the trainer's faith in the horse.

"What chance have you to win?" the admiral asked.

"Lord, Massa Grayson, that is a powerful hoss, powerful."

"Just why do you think he is so powerful, Brooks?" queried the admiral.

"Oh, you'll win a powerful bet on dat hoss," came the reply. "He was just beaten a nose in his las' race."

"Beaten a nose—I don't remember that; the chart don't show it," insisted the admiral.

"Oh, he wuz just beat a nose for fourth place," replied the aged trainer. "He'll win dis race, sho! He's a pow'ful hoss."

But Allanah ran last again.

—Pimlico Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Md., Nov. 9.—The Pimlico Homebred Stakes, fall edition, $2,500 added, furnished tomorrow's feature at Pimlico. C. V. Whitney, offering three of his best 2-year-olds for this purse, seems to have a very strong hand. His nominees are MAGNIFICO, PENNATE and THAIS, the last named a filly, which in her start last Friday, ran a remarkable race after being left at the post, being beaten only a head by her running mate, Halcyon, which had been in command most of the way. She was fifth in the stretch, passing ST. BRIDEAUX, ALBAZANO and others.

Ten two-year-olds are to start in this fixture, and it is believed that either MAGNIFICO or THAIS can win, but as to PENNATE, his last race was disappointing when he ran second to AVALON. ST. BRIDEAUX did not have the best of luck in his last start, but it was not comparable with what befell THAIS which beat him. This Greentree colt should be the contender. Walter M. Jeffords' American Flag colt, AEGIS, should figure in the race. He may be the favorite. He ran fourth in the Futurity, in the mud, the kind of track he likes but which he will not have in this race. He has beaten Happy Scot, and that was on a sloppy track.

FIRST RACE—This is for 2-year-olds at six furlongs. BRONCO, which beat Brighton his last start at Laurel, leading all the way, should win the opener. Leishman will ride the Coe colt, and with his early speed, nothing in the race should catch him. FERVID has been running good races all along, and should be the contender. BRAINS, on his last race, which he won over GUIDE LEFT, should get in the money. LIVE ONE beat his opposition in his two last races and may be close.

SECOND RACE—JANE RINEHART has been carefully prepared for Pimlico. She was third to Rockslide in her last Laurel race, and had the stable backing. She was beaten by about a length. She is well placed in the second race. MAINSHEET looks like the contender. He beat Upset Lad in his last winning race, and is in top form. ARTIE KAY is a dangerous contender, and her last four races in New York have been good. Her second to Ladala was her best. She may be the surprise here.

THIRD RACE—Dixiana Farm's MUCKER looks best of the platers starting in the third race. Her last was in the mud, third to Sun Craig. Previously she was second to Syriac on a fast track, leading most of the way. ORMONBIRD seems to be the one to fear. He has plenty of weight. ORMONBIRD defeated Replevin at Laurel. BLACK PATRICIA should hold the other safe. She has met better fields.

FOURTH RACE—In this race, the champion maiden, AZIZ, at last has found a field she could beat. After running second to such horses as Star Run, Make Haste and Her Grace, and last out to Indian Chief, she should beat the ordinary competition in this number such as TAILSPIN and GUNMAN, the best of the opposition. If she fails here, her case is almost hopeless.

SIXTH RACE—MY SIS ran a powerful race last out against Gerard, 6 furlongs in 1:13. REPLEVIN is probably the contender, but the distance may be short for him. ANGRY is a bad post actor, but has speed. MONTANARO'S last race was good.

SEVENTH RACE—VOLTEAR looks best of the field in the seventh race. He has two pounds less weight than SUNVIR, and while the latter beat him last out, he should, with a better ride, turn the tables. Coltiletti knows how to ride this horse, and in his last start Romano had the mount and failed to make the most of it. BOOT TO BOOT is very dangerous to all of the field. He runs very few good races, but on the Laurel race in which he beat Golden Auburn, he might prove too much for the two placed on top.

WRESTLING

John Kilonis vs. Harry Wolfe
3 Other Star Bouts.
Tuesday Night, Nov. 11th
8:30 P. M.
Strand Theater, 9th & D N.W.
(Archie Parker, Promoter.)

Four Good Mat Bouts At Strand Tomorrow

John Kilonis, the colorful yet at times rough-and-ready Greek grappler, who has appeared upon any number of wrestling cards staged here some years ago, and who built up quite a following through his readiness to "mix" matters with opponents, returns to Washington tomorrow night, featured in the main bout being offered on Archie Parker's inaugural offering at the Strand Theater.

Kilonis is to meet Harry Wolfe, an other who has shown here in the past. Wolfe has compiled quite an enviable record around New York and Philadelphia during the past few seasons and is regarded today as the best wrestler of Jewish extraction now in the game.

Rounding out tomorrow night's card are three other bouts of better than average merit. "Tiny" Webster, former University of Illinois graduate and Big Ten Conference champion, will be found matching speed and stamina with Allen Eustace, of Wakefield, Kans. Webster is said to be the largest man now in the game. Local talent will be given a chance, as both of the two preliminaries will find Washington grapplers in action. Al Backus, instructer at the local Y. M. C. A., is to meet Mario Gigilo, another who has appeared locally quite often. The first bout will bring together "Dutch" Green, of Mohawk fame, and Charlie Nicholson, who hails from New York.

Seaton Hackney Tops In Horse Show Field

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—With the more highly regarded of the international military trophies up for decision during the next three days, Seaton Hackney Farm, of Norristown, N. J., holds a commanding lead over all exhibitors at the national horse show in session at Madison Square Garden.

During the first three days of the show last week, the New Jersey breeding farm, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moore, piled up nine firsts, seven seconds, one third, and one fourth. The majority of the Seaton Hackney Farm's blue ribbons were won in its battle with the Killearn Farm of Milbrook, N. Y., for supremacy in the high gaited harness horse classes.

Opportunities for the Seaton Hackney silks to add to their advantage during the closing days of the show, however, will be few, as the jumpers and saddle horses will hold the spotlight, with the majority of the interest centered on the international military team trophy to be decided between six nations Tuesday night. Mrs. H. Roth, of Redwood City, Calif., with one of the greatest stables ever shown in the national show, ranks second with six victories and as many red ribbons. The Dilwyne farm, of Montchanin, Del., also has six blue ribbons to its triumph but has won less seconds.

for the Washington-Concords as the Uniteds made up for his loss with the addition of a Stuart Junior High player, Stumper. The veterans Turner, Life and Jack Watts apparently got great enjoyment out of the contest and took keen delight in blocking the independent's thrusts.

On paper, the new club appears to be the class of the city. Such well known players as Heise at goal, Georger Faulds at back, the Konnell brothers, Louie and Emil on the forward line and old Dave McLain make them look very formidable. Maybe when they get to know each other better they will play a better game. In fairness to the losers it should be mentioned that George Faulds injured his knee in the first half and did not play in the second.

from the center sent the ball bounding up the field and Ray DuFour recovered for the Apaches. After the Apaches were held, Rauber punted and Hamilton and Moret got to work once more. Sandwiched in between gains by Enright and McMains, the Navy twins completed a pair of tosses to put the ball on the 20-yard line and Hamilton passed to Enright, who was downed on the 10-yard line as the quarter ended.

Hamilton's drop-kick opened the fourth quarter. The Apaches then received the kick-off and started down the field, a pass to Birthright accounting for 10 yards. But this move was halted when McCann's long toss was grounded over the goal line. The Apaches had one other chance which was erased when Spring intercepted a pass in midfield.

The Apaches will make their next appearance under the arc lights at Griffith Stadium Wednesday night. Manager Hall said last night that the Fort Washington team, which defeated the Palace A. C. eleven, probably will provide the opposition.

THREE SCORELESS TIES IN CAPITAL CITY GRID RACE

UNLIMITED LEADERS TIED; CENTENNIALS TROUNCE PENNANTS

MERCURY, Seat Pleasant and Brookland each had a chance to go into undisputed possession of first place in the unlimited section of The Post's Capital Football League yesterday, but each failed to win its fifth round game, the Mercs battling the Marylanders to a 0-0 tie and Brookland playing a scoreless draw with the Marions.

St. Stephen's finally broke into the league's win column in the other circuit contest by trouncing the luckless Alpha Delta Omegas, 6-0. The triumph enabled the Saints to climb out of the cellar berth which they relinquished to the Praters.

The 700 fans who attended the Mercury-Seat Pleasant battle witnessed the best played unlimited game so far this season. Both elevens put up an excellent type of clean, hard football throughout.

The Mercurys had two excellent scoring chances to a single one for the Marylanders. On the last play of the first half Hanniboe tried a drop-kick from Seat Pleasant's 18-yard line, which was too short. An aerial attack by the Southwesters in the final period pushed the ball to the Suburbanites' 12-yard line, where the Seat Pleasants were held for downs.

Blocked Punt Brings Threat.

A blocked punt gave the Marylanders the pigskin on Mercury's 17-yard strip in the third quarter. But the Southwest halted the scoring threat on their 12-yard mark.

The outstanding feature of the battle was the play of both lines. The work of Billy Miles, Ratke, Sims and O. Heflin stood out for Seat Pleasant, while Limerick, Hanniboe and Self took the most prominent parts for the Mercurys.

The Marions fought every inch of the way to hold the Brookland eleven to a tie. Outplayed for most of the game the Southeast players no less than four times braced on their own goal line to stave off Brookland touchdown sorties.

Once in the third quarter the Marions held on their own 19-yard line. Then they attempted to kick out of danger, but Brookland blocked the effort and took the ball on the 9-yard mark. An off-side penalty moved it up 5 yards. But a punchless Brookland drive was halted on fourth down, about 3 inches from the goa line.

Marions' Drive Stopped.

Only once did the Marion offense show to advantage. This occurred the beginning of the second half, the Green-jersied players marching 31 yards to Brookland's 39-yard line before being halted.

Howard Voorhess, Brookland half back, was all over the field, passing, kicking and running the ball to keep his team always within scoring distance. Porter, Licarione and Bergling, of the Marions, were the main reasons why their team held the Brooklands to a draw.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

THE pace-setting Centennials intrenched themselves still more firmly in the top berth of the Capital City League's 135-pound section yesterday afternoon by defeating the Petworth Peasants, 19 to 0, while the Northern Preps and Palace-District Grocery Stores were battling to a 0-to-0 deadlock, and the Columbias weer eking out a 7-to-6 win over the Del Rays.

By beating the Wolverines, 7 to 0, in the remaining contest on the fifth-round schedule, the Brentwood Hawks went into a triple tie with Palace-D. G. S and Columbia for second place in the division standings.

A game Petworth Eleven bowed to the superior teamwork of the Cents in a contest staged on the Gonzaga Field before 600 persons. The Swampoodle players counted a safety and a touchdown in the first period, and another safety in the second quarter.

Centennials Score Touchdown.

The Centennials scored their touchdown toward the end of the first period. Buddy Raffo's 24-yard sprint around end put the ball on Petworth's 3-yard line. Foley then passed to Bussink, who caught the ball on the Pennants' 3-yard mark and lunged across for the 6-pointer. Raffo failed to make the extra point on a line plunge. Shapiro and Whaley scored the two safeties by tackling Petworth ball carlers behind the Pennant goal.

Brilliant defensive work on the part of the winners kept the Petworths from penetrating farther than the Centennial 32-yard line at any point during the battle. The Cents almost had another touchdown in the last minute of play, when Histon just missed catching Bussink's 11-yard pass while standing on the Pet goal line.

Charlie Finnegan, Centennial guard, was the outstanding player of the contest, participating almost in every tackle made by his team and opening many holes for Raffo and Bussink in the Petworth forward wall. Raffo and Whaley also played a fine game fo the winners. Charlie Mehlor, Mills and Ward stood out for the Pennants.

Preps and Palace In Tie.

The Northern Preps for the fourth consecutive time in three years, failed to achieve a much-coveted triumph over the Palace-District Grocery Store outfit in a rough battle played on the Silver Spring Field. The two clubs were evenly matched in every department of play.

The contest for the most part was fought out between the 30-yard strips. Toward the end of the first half Tonker tossed a 21-yard pass to Hall who was brought down on the Northerns' 23-yard mark. The Preps then held for downs. This was the closest either team came to the other's goal line the whole game.

The excellent kicking of Sorrell, of the Northerns, and Tucker, of the Palace, bulwarked the defensive work of both clubs. The Preps tossed six forward passes, completing two for 13 yards. Out of seven Palace aerial attempts, the Southwesters connected three times for 31 yards.

Tonker, Feary and Vernon were the backbone of the Palace-D. G. S. play, while Hargett, Sorrell and Reed showed best for the Northerns.

Columbias Earn Victory.

Displaying a smooth-working backfield in Pieffer, Healy, Smith and Hengtaler, the Columbias outplayed the Del Rays to beat the Virginians, 7-6 on their home field.

The District team drove down the field for its touchdown midway in the first period. A 43-yard march was climaxed when Pieffer smashed his way through center ebhind excellent interference for 6 yards and a touchdown. Smith ploughed off-tackle for the extra point.

Del Ray scored its 6-pointer in the second quarter. M. Frinks was the spearhead of a savage attack which ate up 32 yards of Columbia territory to put the ball within 6 yards of a touchdown. Lunsford, on his second attempt, went over for the score. Nixon failed to tally the point when the Columbia forwards stopped his off-tackle attempt.

Newman intercepted a Del Ray pass in the third period and was tackled on the Virginians' 9-yard strip. The Del Rayans stiffened at this point to take the ball on downs. The Columbias were inside their hosts' 10-yard mrak on other occasions.

Healy's kicking, Pieffer's ball-carrying and Bailey's defensive work were the bright spots in the Columbia performance. Lunsford, Edelin and Clark starred for Del Ray.

Battling through three scoreless quarters, the Wolverines weakened in the fourth period to allow the Brentwood Hawks to score the only 6-pointer of the battle and then kick goal. The battle was staged on the Mount Rainier Field.

Traver Recovers Fumble.

With six minutes of play remaining, Traver, Hawk lineman, pounced on a Wolve fumble 16 yards from the Southeasters' goal line. Williams and W. Feiner made 5 yards on two line plunges, and then the former dropped back and passed to Finch for the touchdown. W. Feiner drop-kicked the point after touchdown.

The Wolverines rushed the pigskin to the Hawks' 4-yard strip in the last minute of the second period. Gerdom made 3 yards at center as the half ended. A sensational 45-yard forward pass, Minor to Gerdom, in the last minute of the game put the ball on Brentwood's 36-yard line. Another pass was grounded as the final gun sounded.

Phillip's 66-yard kick helped the Wolves out of a bad hole in the first quarter after they had tarken the oval on downs on their own 9-yard strip.

Travers and Williams, of the winners, and Bell and Gerdom, of the Wolverines, were the outstanding players of the battle.

AMERICAN PAIR OUT.

Berlin, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Bobby Walthour, American bicycle rider, and his Australian partner, George Dempsey, were removed from the Berlin six-day bike race today because the umpires declared they persistently failed to attempt to better their chances when they were ten laps behind. This eliminates all American entries from the race.

Trojans' 74-0 Victory Is Record for Coast

San Francisco, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Into the records of a football season already bulging with big scores and unexpected endings has been written the worst defeat ever inflicted by one major team upon another in the history of the Pacific Coast Conference. When Southern California's Trojans rolled up the overwhelming total of 74 points to nothing against California's Bears at Los Angeles yesterday, the 82,000 fans assembled in the Coliseum witnessed an event that only fifteen-year-old records can even come close to rivaling.

In 1918 a powerful Washington eleven came to Berkeley to defeat a weak and inexperienced California team, 72-0. Old-time observers never expected that score to be equaled in games involving the Coast's "Big Four," California, Southern California, Washington and Stanford. And yet the Trojan victory yesterday was over a team whose predecessors have enjoyed national ranking for nearly a decade.

A LABAMA'S GRIDMEN IN FRONT

Tide Nears Southern Conference Honors; Georgia Threat.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Alabama's Crimson Legions removed another obstacle—Florida—from their path toward the Southern Conference football championship yesterday, as their mightiest remaining foe, Georgia, scored an impressive intersectional victory over New York University.

Florida, which held Georgia to a scoreless tie a week ago, was no match for the Raging Behemoths from Tuscaloosa. The score was 20 to 0.

Georgia proved it was one of the Nation's great teams by downing, 7 to 6, New York University, which had shattered Carnegie Tech, among other teams.

Tulane, the only other team unbeaten in conference play, which meets Georgia next Saturday in a game which will eliminate one from championship consideration, had its hands full with a fighting Auburn Eleven, winning, 21 to 0, after a hard battle.

Duke Eleven Upsets Kentucky.

Jimmy Dehart's final gridiron edition at Duke offered something of an upset in trouneing Kentucky, 14 to 7, at Durham. Duke has won over the Navy and Villa Nova, but its decision over the widely heralded Wildcat Eleven came as a surprise to its most loyal supporters.

In a game of fumbles and wild passing, Vanderbilt won its annual contest from Georgia Tech, 6 to 0.

Maryland scored three touchdowns in the first quarter and added three more in the second and third periods to trample Washington and Lee, 41 to 7.

Clemson struck its stride again against Virginia Military and gave the Cadets a 32 to 0 beating.

In addition to Georgia's win, Dixie teams were successful in four other intersectional tilts. Mississippi College won from the University of Mexico, 40-0; Louisville beat DePaul, 10-0; Centre downed Wabash, 53-0, and Loyola beat Butler, 33-0. Oglethorpe and Wittenberg played a scoreless tie, while Temple beat Miami, of Florida, 34-0.

South Carolina lost its annual State battle with Furman, 14-0; Tennessee Reserves swarmed over Carson Newman to win, 34-0; Louisiana State turned back Mississippi, 6-0, and Sewanee and Chattanooga played 60 minutes to a scoreless deadlock. V. P. I. won its yearly battle with Virginia, 34 to 13. Mississippi A. and M. was beaten by Henderson Teachers, of Arkansas, 28-7.

Presbyterian, Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association leader, rang up its seventh consecutive win by defeating Wake Forest, 13-0. Georgetown, of Kentucky, fell from the list of unbeaten S. I. A. A. teams as Kentucky Wesleyan won, 19 to 0.

The standing of the Southern Conference football teams, together with the points scored and opponents' points in all games, including contests of Saturday, November 8, follow:

The Mercury Jrs. proved no match for the fast-traveling G. P. O.-Federals yesterday afternoon on the Fairlawn field, when they lost to the Feds, 26-0. Smith returned a punt 66 yards for a touchdown to provide the outstanding feature of the game.

Monroe scored two touchdowns, one after taking a short pass and running 94 yards across the Merc goal, the other on a short line buck. Lucas and Meyer went across for the other Fed tallies.

IN THE COLLEGE CORNER

By JACK ESPEY

DROP-KICKING is said to be a lost art in football, but the Boston College Eagles can't see it. Drop kicks have caused their defeat in three of their major games. Fordham beat them with one, Marquette with two and our own Georgetown with one—a point after touchdown by Johnny Scalzi.

That brings to mind that Coach Tommy Mills, of Georgetown, stated before the season opened that he didn't like to win games with field goals. Scalzi's kick last Sturday wasn't recorded as a field goal, but it was of the same kind. Still, knowing Tommy to be sincere, we assume that he hasn't changed his feeling.

New York U. bowed to the Notre Dame system as exemplified by Georgia. Which shouldn't sound so bad to Georgetown.

Georgetown always has a bigger and better band on the field in New York than here. Some New York musicians with uniforms of blue and gray are recruited by the Hilltoppers when they go up to meet the Violets. Where's that man from the Carnegie Foundation.

Western Maryland scouts must have gotten headaches from what they saw as Maryland swamped Washington and Lee. The two Marylands clash in Baltimore December 6. The odds on Western Maryland have already begun to shorten.

They say that Shorty Chalmers, Maryland's wizard of the past, can part your hair at 50 yards. We saw him do his stuff sainst the Generals and will go no better. He can hit any given key on a piano board at 100.

And about Ray Poppelman, about whom much hasn't been said. Here's an open field runner for anybody's team. He runs directly into oncoming tacklers instead of away from them, and still goes through. Some of the Generals were so close to him on that 50-yard touchdown run that they could have counted his eyelashes. They could have done this as well as what they actually did, for all the good it brought them.

That victory over W. and L. assured Maryland of a lofty position in the northern section rankings of the Southern Conference. If V. P. I. is defeated next Saturday, Byrd's Team won't have to doff its headpiece to any of its rivals.

It's the 40 horsemen of Notre Dame now. Or is it 50? Rockne's football army is so big that he can cart a half hundred all around the country for major games and still leave the reserves and the "B" squad to battle evenly with the smaller fry at home.

It seems as if Notre Dame's mad rush to the national championship won't even slow down for breath. If anybody can make the Irish hesitate or stop it is Southern California. The Trojans' 74-to-0 defeat of California, conqueror of St. Mary's, one of 1929's unbeaten, makes them a threat, at least.

DISTRICT A. A. U. BODY WOULD EXTEND TERRITORY

Nearby Towns Affected by Proposal

D. C. Body Asks Authority Within 15-Mile Radius.

Matter to Be Decided at Convention Here Next Week.

EXTENSION of the territory of the District of Columbia Association to cover an area within a 15-mile radius of Washington has been applied for by the local association to the redistricting committee of the Amateur Athletic Union. The application is now under consideration and will be acted on at the national convention of the union to be held here next week in the Hamilton Hotel.

The extension would give the District Association jurisdiction over amateur athletics in the towns of Rockville, Beltsville, Hyattsville and Upper Marlboro in Maryland, and in Alexandria, Vienna and Fairfax in Virginia. This would also make it possible for the admission to membership of several Army post athletic organizations should they desire to affiliate with the association.

Final Meeting Preceding National Conclave.

Discussion of the application occupied part of the monthly meeting of the board of managers of the association yesterday afternoon in the Hamilton. It was the final meeting of the local body prior to the national convention, the sponsorship of which has been undertaken by the association headed by John D. O'Reilly, of Georgetown University, assisted by a special committee under the direction of Winfree Johnson, secretary-treasurer of the association.

Announcement of the schedule for the convention will be forthcoming shortly. More than 250 delegates representing 26 member organizations of the union throughout the United States and possessions are expected to attend. The general sessions of the convention will be presided over by Avery Brundage, of Chicago, national president.

It is expected that several nationally known persons will address the delegates during the course of the three-day meeting which opens next Sunday at noon.

Texas Christians Top Southwest Title Pack

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Still riding the crest of a winning streak marred only by a pair of ties since 1928, Texas Christian University had passed the halfway mark in its drive toward a second straight Southwest Conference title. By stopping Rice, 20-0, yesterday at Houston, the speedy Christians placed themselves in undisputed possession of the leadership. With three wins to their credit, they now face the task of turning back the University of Texas, Baylor and Southern Methodist on successive week-ends.

The Christians could lose one of their remaining bouts and finish in front, as they play one more conference tilt than the University of Texas Longhorns, their most dangerous rivals.

The standing:

Texas Christian	3	0	0	1.000
Texas	2	0	1	.667
Arkansas	2	1	0	.667

SHOREY IS WINNER IN CHAMPS' TOURNEY

the participants had gathered in the clubhouse the suggestion that the event be made an annual fixture was unanimously voted by all the golfers, in which decision Robert Stead, jr., chairman of the golf committee of the Chevy Chase Club, heartily concurred.

"This has been a most successful experiment," he said, "and I hope that in the future similar tournaments will be sponsored by the District Golf Association as a fixture in our golfing program." The same idea was expressed in a letter from Joseph Kaufman, president of the Woodmont Club, who was called to Baltimore on account of a death in his family, and who wrote that while the tournament yesterday was an unofficial effort to get all the champions together, he hoped that it would be repeated in the future. The scores:

John C. Shorey, Bannockburn champion, 38—38—76; Howard Nordlinger, Woodmont champion, 40—39—79; LeRoy D. Saxicer, Indian Spring champion, 38—41—79; Frank K. Roesch, Washington Golf and Country champion, 40—41—81; C. Ashmead Fuller, Chevy Chase champion, 41—40—81; George F. Miller, Manor champion, 40—43—83; Everett Eynon, Columbia champion, 41—44—85; Volney Bennett, Beaver Dam champion, 42—43—85; L. T. Harrison, Argyle champion, 45—41—86.

A delegation of Washington professional golfers have left to play in the Pinehurst tournament this week, including Robert T. Barnett and Gene Larkin, Chevy Chase; Arthur B. Thorn, Woodmont; Walter Cunningham, Burning Tree; Walter Hall, Bretton Woods; Al Treder, Manor, and A. L. Houghton, Kenwood. The latter has been paired to play with Horton Smith and William Melhorn.

Rocky Mountain Title To Utah or Colorado

Denver, Colo., Nov. 9 (A.P.).—All the preliminaries out of the way, Utah and Colorado Universities will meet Saturday in Boulder for the Rocky Mountain Conference football championship. Utah's Crimson horde yesterday stopped the ineffectual challenge of Colorado College in Salt Lake, 41-6, for its twenty-first consecutive victory since midway in the season of 1927. Colorado got a good workout against the Colorado Teachers, winning 27 to 7.

Saturday's game at Boulder will mark the second year in succession Colorado has played Utah for the Rocky Mountain title. Utah whipped the Centennial team, 40-0, last season. It was the only game Colorado lost.

The biggest surprise of the year in the Rockies was Wyoming's 21 to 6 win over the Colorado Aggies at Fort Collins. It was the first conference victory for the Cowboys in three years and a great tribute for its new coach, "Choppy" Rhodes, the former Nebraska star. Denver University knocked Utah Aggies completely out of the running by a 32 to 7 triumph in Denver.

Oklahoma Now Tops Big Six Grid Teams

Kansas City, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Oklahoma today stood alone at the top of the Big Six Conference, the only undefeated team following Nebraska's unseating of Kansas. Not even the most enthusiastic Oklahoma supporter pictured the Sooners at the top two months ago, when practice begun.

The 16-to-0 defeat of Kansas by Nebraska yesterday was not exactly an upset, but the thoroughness with which the defending champions routed a team picked by nearly every critic as a certain title winner a month ago, dazed even Cornhusker fans.

While Kansas was having its difficulties with Nebraska, Oklahoma regulars used themselves sparingly against the freshmen and conserved their energy for the Kansas game this week. Missouri accounted for its second victory in six games and made its conference record .500 by handing Iowa State its sixth consecutive defeat, 14 to 0.

Standing:

Team.	W.	L.	Pct.	Pts.	Opp.
Oklahoma	3	0	1.000	100	37
Nebraska	2	1	.667	103	30
Kansas	2	1	.667	99	50
Missouri	1	1	.500	41	100
Kansas Aggies	1	2	.333	41	57
Iowa State	0	4	.000	21	74

ROCKNE CLUB NOW RATED HIS BEST

Notre Dame Reserves Not Up to Usual High Standard.

than the celebrated four horsemen, about whom have grown a legend that isn't wholly justified by achievement. Not once did Layden-Crowley-Miller-Stuhldreher et al. show the concerted power and devasting speed that Schwartz-Brill-Savoldi-Carideo & Co. have developed this year.

The horsemen, socalled, never piled up the scores that this year's team has piled up. There were no such victories on that roll as those scored over Pittsburgh this year and over Penn 36 hours back. That was a smoothly functioning team, perhaps a bit better defensively, but there wasn't the destructive drive that Rockne has built up for 1930.

Last year's team was an even better outfit, defensively, than this horsemen, but they had only elder as a serious scoring threat, whereas the 1930 team has Schwartz, Brill and Savoldi, not to mention O'Connor and Koken as superlative scoring threats.

Reserves Not as Good As Usual.

Rockne's reserves don't seem to be so good this year as in '25 or '29. The genial Dane can't send his second string in now as he did then and depend upon them holding the enemy in check. Rockne's success in the horseman era was dependent a great deal upon the ability of his second stringers.

They were a first-class football team alone. Last year he had plenty of second string power and another winning team could have been fashioned from his reserves.

W. Va. Governor to See Marshall-Wesleyan

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 9.—Gov. and Mrs. William G. Conley will have their Thanksgiving pigskin and turkey in Huntington this year. Fairfield Stadium will be colorfully dressed in the Green and White of Marshall and the Orange and Black of Wesleyan as the Bobcats and Thundering Herd clash in their annual turkey day football game. The State chief executive and his official family will see the battle from the governor's box at the 50-yard line.

Brass bands, a bugle corps, official escorts and the riotous stunts of collegiate cheering squads will join with gridiron fans from all sections of West Virginia to add spirit and gayety to a lively day.

Quantico Marines to Play Legions' All-Star Grid Team

Former College Stars to Meet Devil Dogs in Clash at Philadelphia Tomorrow; Committee of Coaches Select Team.

MORE than 65,000 persons are expected to be in the stands at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, tomorrow, when Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler's crack Quantico Marines Post eleven stacks up against the American Legion's All-Star College Team, of the Quaker City.

The legion outfit will be composed of former stars from Penn, Princeton, Villanova, Yale, Temple, Penn State and Harvard. A committee, headed by Lud Wray, of Penn, and Bill Roper, of Princeton, made the selections.

The entire Marine contingent at Quantico, 2,000 strong, will leave early tomorrow morning for the scene of the clash. They will be accompanied by their 140-piece band, which will head the mammoth parade scheduled to precede the contest. The Quantico Band also will play for the Legion ball at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel tomorrow night.

The Quantico Post eleven has been undefeated for two seasons. It boasts such outstanding players as C. C. Coffman and Sol Levensky, former Naval Academy stars; Thomas Noon, former Notre Dame luminary, and F. G. Dailey, who starred with Nebraska several years ago. Head Coach Capt. Elmer E. Hall has built his team around these men.

The proceeds from the contest will go toward the fund now being raised to build a school for children of enlisted men stationed at Quantico.

N. Y. AWAITS TITLE BOUT FRIDAY

Singer-Canzoneri to Clash in Week's Ring Feature.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—A battle for the lightweight championship of the world with Al Singer defending his crown against Tony Canzoneri, former featherweight title holder, comes to the rescue of the national boxing program this week and saves it from almost complete obscurity.

The battle, which is to take place in Madison Square Garden Friday night, is something of a novelty for New York. It is the first time in nine years a lightweight title bout has been staged indoors here. Singer won the championship from Sammy Mandell in an outdoor fight last summer.

Canzonen Rated Leading Contender.

Canzoneri is considered the leading contender for the lightweight crown as a former title holder and a veteran scrapper who once gave Mandell a great fight for the title. It is the first time the title has been at stake since Singer won it.

Other battles on the national program offer few high spots. The program includes:

MONDAY—At Oklahoma City, Emmett Rocco, Elwood City, Pa., vs. Ancus Snyder, Dodge City, Kans., heavyweights, ten rounds.

TUESDAY—At Los Angeles, Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., vs. Maurice Holtzer, France, lightweights, ten rounds.

WEDNESDAY—At Seattle, Dade Biscot, Monroe, Wash., vs. Patsy Mullins, Calgary, Canada, middleweights, six rounds.

THURSDAY—At Cincinnati, Johnny Farr, Cleveland, vs. Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, featherweights, ten rounds.

FRIDAY—At Hollywood, Calif., Al Fay, Chicago, vs. Vince Droman, Inglewood, Calif., heavyweights, ten rounds.

The Truth About Prohibition Espionage on CAPITOL HILL

George L. Cassiday, Congressional bootlegger, whom Roger Butts was instructed to watch in an effort to catch him making a sale of liquor in the Senate Office Building.

WHY did Vice President Curtis order a prohibition agent to spend four months in the Senate Office Building to spy on bootleg liquor purchasers? . . . What were the results of this investigation? . . . How was it accomplished? . . . The answers to these questions provide a narrative of exceptional interest and a natural sequel to the recent Post revelations in regard to the bootlegging activities of the famous "Man in the Green Hat."

Trapping "The Man in the Green Hat"

By ROGER BUTTS—The Man Who Did It

After Vice President Curtis had himself revealed the planting of a prohibition agent in the Senate Office Building, The Washington Post located Butts and obtained this unusual series of articles, relating his experiences while endeavoring to catch George L. Cassiday in the act of making a sale . . . He tells of work in the stationery room, of meeting various public figures, and his efforts to gain the confidence of the man he was instructed to watch. How he overcame suspicion, and the facts that he later learned, are revealed for the first time in this amazing story . . . No one who has followed the recent articles by Maj. Maurice Campbell and by "The Man in the Green Hat" will wish to miss a single paragraph—and it will prove as interesting to every other Washington citizen.

CAPITAL MOTORISTS GIVEN GOOD RATING

SUSPENSIONS ARE CITED

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Bad as some Washington motorists think their fellow drivers are, they compare quite favorably with the Nation as a whole. The yardstick by which their driving qualifications may be measured is the annual number of revocations under the operator's permit law.

For Washington last year the ratio was 1 driver in every 142 permit holders eliminated from the streets of the National Capital. In ten States that withdrew the privilege of operating a motor car from those who failed to demonstrate their fitness, the situation is not so assuring. The ratio runs as high as 1 in 17, and six of the ten States show a greater proportion of their drivers losing their permits than that which prevails locally.

As traffic officials regard it, the result was that in Washington 1,186 serious violators of the law were rendered impotent to menace life and property by depriving them of their permits. Nationally, the revocations and suspensions totaled 179,105 in 1929, the average of 1 in 46.

Sentiment on Increase.

Close scrutiny of the sentiment developing for enactment of such a law indicates that it is growing in favor in more States each year. The reason for this sentiment is quickly revealed. It lies in the fact that accident statistics provide indisputable evidence that the human element, or the driver, is responsible for 75 to 85 per cent of all traffic mishaps. The natural deduction is that the figures indicate a need for some control over or check upon the driver. A license law provides such control.

Of the estimated 35,000,000 motor vehicle operators in the United States, less than half, on approximately 16,000,000, now are subject to license. At present 19 States and the District of Columbia require operators' permits. Of these, two States, South Carolina and Kentucky, enacted such statutes this year.

Advancing the driver's license law as the most valuable safety weapon in their hands, motor vehicle authorities in these States are prepared to defend their position with an imposing array of statistics. While there is a wide variation in results, analysis of the figures shows that the law is constantly employed to reject and eliminate the unfit driver.

Many Major Offenses.

Carelessness, recklessness, drunken driving, conviction of a felony, serious accident, failure to report accidents, leaving the scene of an accident, a generally bad moral record, making false statements, improper registration, habitual law violation, inability to read signals, physical and mental disability and defective equipment were among the major offenses for which drivers suffer revocation or suspension of permits.

Into these categories, statistics show, fall those drivers who are responsible for a majority of the fatal traffic mishaps, estimated as likely to reach 36,000 this year. Without a driver's license law, the State has no way of eliminating such operators. That is the uniform story told by motor vehicle authorities in the States which have license laws, officials whose quest for the dangerous driver is as enthusiastic as it is unceasing.

The severity with which the revocation and suspension penalty is applied varies widely between different States. Last year Massachusetts established a new record in using this drastic punishment. It revoked or suspended 1 license in 17. The Bay State situation is unusual, however. Nearly one-half of the permit losses were ascribable to the State's compulsory liability insurance law. That statute makes permit revocation mandatory unless the holder can obtain insurance protection. Policy cancellation automatically suspends one's permit.

West Virginia Situation.

At the other extreme from Massachutts is West Virginia. Only 300 of the State's 287,889 operators suffered loss of their permits, a ratio of 1 to 959. This figure likewise is unusual. It is explained by the fact that driving while intoxicated is virtually the only offense thus penalized in that State. In between stands the District of Columbia.

New York and Connecticut, both of which have driver insurance laws, though different in character from that of Massachusetts, were next to the Bay State in doling out "the supreme penalty" to drivers. New York revoked or suspended 97,640 permits during the year, a ratio of 1 in 27. Connecticut's ratio was 1 in 34, with a total of 11,097 drivers thus punished.

For the twelve State and municipal areas for which figures are complete the ratio of suspensions and revocations to active permits is 1 to 46. Of 8,228,159 licensed drivers, 179,105 lost their right to drive last year.

Figures Are Compared.

Complete figures are given in the following table:

State.	No. of Permits.	Punished 1929.	Ratio.
New York	2,708,709	97,640	1 in 27
Pennsylvania	2,095,546	5,869	1 in 356

The weight of specific offenses in costing motorists the privilege of driving is revealed in New York's carefully tabulated permit figures. Participation in serious personal injury accidents leads the list. A total of 17,978 drivers losing their permits for this cause last year. Reckless driving was a close second with 17,345 suspensions or revocations. Exactly 10,986 individuals were thus penalized for driving while drunk with 4,744 similar cases pending at the close of the year. Being charged with homicide cost 2,838 drivers their permits, while making false statements, failure to report accidents, and permitting unlicensed operators to drive each accounted for more than 2,000 such losses.

Keystone State Cited.

In Pennsylvania, where motor vehicle officials believe fear of permit loss is the greatest force for keeping drivers in the straight and narrow path, operating while intoxicated leads the list of penalized offenses. The number of such suspensions and revocations was 2,225.

Indicating how the law may be applied to the criminal class generally are 887 losses of license by larceny offenders, 288 for illegal transportation and similar offenses, and 275 for impersonation.

Showing substantially the same thing are Massachusetts' figures which reveal that 5,570 individuals last year lost the driving privilege on the ground that their records established them as "improper persons" to operate a motor vehicle. Next to permit losses growing out of the insurance law, reckless and careless operation of cars was responsible in the Bay State for the largest number of suspensions and revocations, accounting for approximately 10,500.

That the Bay State rigorously enforces its law requiring care to be kept in a safe mechanical condition at all times is reflected in 3,697 driver's license suspensions for failure to obey this provision.

Difficulty of States.

The worst offenses, it is unanimously agreed by all authorities, are justly punished only when the guilty driver no longer is allowed to drive. Yet States without a license law can not administer such a penalty. Since they do not confer the privilege of driving they can not revoke or suspend it when the motorist has demonstrated his unfitness.

The lowest age limit at which any of the licensing States will grant a driver's permit is 12 years. Only one does so, South Carolina. Three of the nineteen States grant licenses at 14. They are California, Michigan and West Virginia. Two, Washington and Maine, license operators at the age of 15.

The 16-year minimum is in effect in the District of Columbia, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Wisconsin and Kentucky.

New Jersey puts its minimum limit at 17.

The precise effect of a driver's license law upon safety can not be statistically shown. So many other elements enter into the accident ratio, such as street widths, volume and distribution of traffic, and numerous similar factors. While a specific value can not be assigned to it, however, those cities in which drivers are licensed make a uniformly better safety record than others.

Cities of Over 350,000.

Among cities with a population of more than 350,000 the last comparative figures available cover the first nine months of 1930. They show Washington and Boston, both of which have rigorous license laws and drastic suspension penalties, to lead the country in respect to low fatality rates. The ratio of fatal accidents to 100,000 population in both cities is 13.2.

At the other end of the list are Cleveland and Cincinnati. In neither of these are drivers required to have permits. Cleveland's accident rate, the highest in the country, although lower than in 1929, is 29.2 per 100,000 population; Cincinnati's is 28.0. In Indianapolis and Chicago, neither of which licenses drivers, the rates are respectively 27.5 and 23.0.

In New York and Philadelphia, where all operators are licensed and permits subject to suspension or revocation, the accident rate for the first nine months of the current year is 18.6 and 19.3, respectively. San Francisco and Milwaukee have records of 18.5 and 17.2. Drivers in both cities are subject to the control of a license law.

With significant uniformity throughout the list, those cities where motorists are required to obtain permits make the best safety records. Precisely how much of this superiority is to be ascribed to the weeding out of the unfit is not determinable by statistics as they now are compiled.

Where operator's permits are required, however, officials insist the requirement is the first factor in safety because it provides a way to eliminate the unfit forty-sixth driver who causes the majority of accidents.

FAIR COURSE IS HELD BY RETAIL BUSINESS

Aid of Chase National Bank Says Slump Is Not as Bad as Rumors Say.

WHOLESALE BUYING OFF

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The somewhat lower seasonal trends which appear at this time of year were reflected in contractions of most indices of business activity during the past week.

Mercantile reviews pointed out that the peak season of wholesale buying is now past, and that the autumn trade has in the main failed of the expansion which normal seasonal influences alone had indicated. Retail buying, however, held up fairly well, and should be stimulated by the approach of the holidays in the next few weeks.

Business sentiment remained so gloomy in many quarters that economists who have not heretofore been inclined to stress the psychological factor in the present depression asserted that pessimism was being overdone. Bankers again found it necessary to point out, that after all, conditions are still much more favorable than they were in 1921.

Dr. Benjamin Anderson, jr., economist of the Chase National Bank, said, "Some of us are seeing ghosts today, and the situation is not as bad as rumors have made it or hysteria in certain places have made it."

Depression Overestimated.

Dr. Anderson expressed the belief that business is worse than it needs to be, even recognizing all of the fundamental difficulties with which it must contend. He felt that improvement could come at any time, and be very substantial improvement, but said he did not know when it would come.

Even at its worst, statistical evidence shows that 1930 has not fallen to the low levels of 1921, and Dr. Anderson pointed out that today, business is not held back by lack of credit, while in 1921, "Financial embarrassments were so acute that many businesses could not even do the business that was in sight."

R. C. Stephenson, president of the American Bankers Association, points out in the issue of the association's journal published this week, that production has fallen below the levels of minimum consumption. "Production fell sharply below the volume required even for minimum consumption, and now that surplus stores are nearing depletion, and shortages developing, the forces of replenishment must come into play again."

The weekly freight car loadings report was better than expected, showing a substantial gain from the preceding week, but the fact that this increase was largely accounted for by seasonal movement of coal, while less than car load lots of merchandise declined, took the edge off this report.

Steel Mill Output Still Sags.

Steel mill operations continued to slacken. Iron Age estimated ingot output at 48 per cent of capacity, against 50 per cent the previous week. Scrap steel prices were again under pressure, but finished steel and pig iron held steady. The placing of the unusually large order for 50,000 tons of pig iron by American Radiator was interpreted in some quarters as indicating the belief that prices had touched bottom. Early pick-up in automotive manufacturing is expected.

The petroleum industry was still unsettled. Refiners' gasoline stocks continue to pile up and the committee on petroleum economics reported that a reduction in output of at least 7 per cent must be made if supply is not to continue to exceed demand. In the copper industry it was understood that unofficial conferences looking to world curtailment were in progress and that large producers were declining to sell at the price of 9¼ cents a pound.

Fresh instability of commodity prices was again a troublesome factor. During the forepart of the week wheat tumbled to the lowest prices in 24 years and cotton reacted, after a fortnight of gains. Late in the week, however, cotton again advanced. Hides, silk, coffee, rubber and tin also had sinking spells, but zinc was firmer. A study of past depressions shows that business usually picks up some months before commodity prices, but recovery seems to require a flattening out of the commodity price movement.

PROMINENT STOCKS LEAD LOSING TREND

Quoted Value of 90 Issues Shrinks 7 Per Cent in Past Week.

UTILITIES SUFFER MOST

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The quoted value of equity shares actively traded in the stock exchange shrank about 7 per cent last week to the lowest level in three years and three months, as measured by the price index of 90 representative issues.

Undoubtedly the quoted value of all listed shares declined less drastically, for the index of 90, as compiled by the Standard Statistics Co., is based upon the more prominent issues, in which selling was the heaviest, but the index provides an indication of the deflation that has taken place. This index dropped 9½ points to 126 1-5.

There were but five trading days, as the market was closed on election day, and trading was in comparatively small volume, exceeding 3,000,000 shares only on Friday. The market held about stationary on Monday, broke 4 points on Wednesday, rallied slightly on Thursday, dropped 4½ on Friday and 1 3-5 yesterday.

Election Factor Discounted.

Of course, there was an inclination in some quarters to connect the action of the market with the election results, but the joint statement of seven Democratic leaders expressing their intention of cooperating with the administration to remedy the economic situation failed to stop the decline. Such a statement, had there been any wide apprehension on that score, might have caused the normal technical rebound which most observers feel is overdue.

The utilities suffered the widest declines, and some observers pointed in this connection to the victory of candidates favoring strict control of electric power companies in some of the gubernatorial elections. These shares, however, have been selling higher in relation to earnings, than the rest of the list, so that their decline could as logically be interested as merely a readjustment to the general level of quoted values.

Even at the end of the week, the price index of 20 utilities was 3 points above the lowest of last year, while that of 50 industrials was the lowest since 1927, and that of 20 rails, the lowest since 1926. The combined index of 90 was the lowest since early August, 1927.

Source of Selling Obscure.

It was difficult to trace the basic source of the further selling. The most common explanation seemed to be that it was still a reflection of disappointment over the failure of the seasonal upturn in business to reach normal proportions in October, as the protracted decline of June was generally traced to disappointment over failure of business to make the recovery expected in the spring.

It was also felt that the decline had been aggravated by unreasoning fear and by certain individual situations, such as the liquidation impaired collateral loans, and the execution of strings of stop loss orders.

There was a little inclination to trace the decline to professional bearish operations, for the big bear operators are still understood to have been restrained, and the brisk upturns caused by short covering have failed to appear.

SELLING MOVEMENT DOMINATING BONDS

Factors Seen as Favorable For Rally, but Prices Continue to Lose.

HIGHER UTILITIES RISE

New York, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—Selling dominated the trend of bonds last week, although conditions that normally influence a rise remain the best that have existed in several years.

Outweighing the favorable factors was the heaviness of the stock market and, as on similar occasions in the past, bonds dipped as the sharp declines in equity issues forced emergency selling of investments.

Early in the week, which was shortened by election day, the effect of liquidation was partially offset by the inquiry for gilt-edge bonds, but pressure on railroad stocks extended to fixed income obligations of carriers, culminating on Friday in a sharp setback for bonds in the most active session in a fortnight.

Declines in Indices.

While not fully reflecting the losses sustained during the week, the average price of 30 bonds dropped three-tenths of a point to 98.6, compared with the year's low of 98.4. Railroads dropped eight-tenths of a point in the averages and the industrials lost one-half. While not escaping from the liquidation on Friday nor the irregularity earlier in the week, high-grade utilities were higher.

All in all, the market made a dismal showing, although the easy tone of the money market remained undisturbed; commodity prices are at the lowest levels in recent years and the reservoir of funds of banks and other institutions for investment continues to mount to almost unprecedented volume.

The failure of second grade issues to follow the lead of gilt edge issues that have been strengthened by institutional inquiry has caused disappointment in investment circles which have faith in the potency of cheap money as a stimulant. The desultory activity leads the National City Bank to point out that study of the movement in 1920 and 1921 reveals a parallel case.

Parallel Case Recalled.

During the first half of 1920 while business was nearing a crisis the bond market declined steadily, but prices turned upward immediately after the initial break in share prices and rallied during the late summer and fall and then remained practically stationary for ten months. It was unable to make any notable progress until the summer of 1921, when business and the stock market assumed a rosier hue.

In financial circles the belief is growing that demand for fixed income securities will not broaden to influence a robust rally until confidence in the future of business is restored. At present it is conceded that the so-called private investor remains on the sidelines so far as the bond market is concerned, and that most of the buying is of institutional origin. Banks, however, avoid all except the highest type of investment.

Profiting by their experience early in the year when new offerings appeared in such volume as to cause sluggishness among listed issues, investment houses have altered their plans for fall financing in view of the unsettled condition of the market. The total for last week was only $34,500,000, of which nearly two thirds was in municipal issues. This compared with the previous week's total of $17,643,000, the second smallest of the year, and $16,866,000 a year ago when the stock panic called a temporary halt on corporate investment financing.

Pursue Ideal's Gleam, Rev. E. O. Clark Advises

Following It, He Says, Is Risk and Romance of Glorious Living.

REV. E. O. CLARK.

The Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor of Chevy Chase Baptist Church, preaching at the union evening service of the Chevy Chase Protestant churches, spoke, in part, as follows:

"Lo, the star which they saw in the east went before them, until it came and stood over where the young child was." Matt. 2:10. That star in the east was luminous with light and lovely with roseate hues amid the lingering shadows of the darkness as it guided the savants of the Orient to the Light of the World. No wonder their hearts leaped within them. No wonder that with haste and persistence they followed 'to the end of the way of that wandering star' until they came at last to the place where the young child was.

"Only a star, perhaps, but it speaks the language of symbolism in a world too much beset with dull prose. It is, therefore, suggestive to us of those subtle overtones of spiritual reality which we find in Jesus of Nazareth. For, as the pervasive fragrance of the rose escapes the hard realist with test tube, so the beautiful radiance of the personality of Jesus eludes the prosaic materialist.

Following the Gleams.

"To these seeking seers of the East there was something more than just a bright star shining above them; it was a portent of a heavenly revelation; it was a symbol of the coming Saviour. Why was that? Because they were seeking that which they found. We always see that for which we are looking. When some one asked Isaac Newton how he happened to discover the law of gravitation, he replied, 'Because I was thinking about it.' If we are to find beauty in life, we must seek it. If we are to have faith in humanity, we must be ready to discern the signs of nobler manhood when revealed to our eyes. If we are to find Him, whom to know aright is Life Eternal, we must follow the shining gleams of the Ideal until we come at last to Bethlehem.

Ideal Eludes Often.

"The Ideal is not easy to attain. It so often eludes our grasp. Yet the bright beams lead ever on and on. There is the ray of fidelity. How impossible it is to capture fidelity in a band-box and deliver it complete to a young couple at the marriage altar. And yet we must have faithfulness in the home and elsewhere in life, or we fall from our high prerogative. Vows thus taken and kept are the risk and romance of glorious living.

"Take again the gleam of constancy which holds a man to worthy convictions of right and honor. It, too, is one of life's imperatives. All too many folks today are wobbly as regards their obligations and privileges in the Christian church. A consistency and devotion to the church's aims and ideals is urgently needed.

"That star shines also with gleams of purity. Some folks today see only a sensual materialism about them. Religion is all mist; morality is all nonsense. Such seems to be the conviction of most leaders in our world of commercialized pleasures. They are saying in effect, 'On with the show, let sex be unrefined.'

Faith Is Necessary.

"Added to purity must be faith. You can not catch this elusive light of the soul, in a test tube, and yet without faith our existence is darkness and death. The present is a time which calls strongly for faith, faith in yourself no matter how dark the day is; faith in your fellowman no matter if some have failed you; faith in God, the anchor of the soul, the dynamic of things that are to be. Is there pessimism abroad? Things will never be good again? Go to church! Get a new pair of spectacles! God's in His heaven, all's right with the world.

Light of Love.

"From that star comes also the bewitching light of love. You can not measure love with a yardstick, yet it is more real than calico. We all believe in love; what we need is to practice it. Tomorrow when upon the street car a hard-working Negro mother sits beside you, follow the gleam—remember that she is tired and human like the rest of us. When you are driving upon the highway, do as you would be done by.

Follow On!

"These differing gleams from the star which shone so brightly o'er the eastern horizon combine to make the glistening radiance of spiritual loveliness in Jesus. The star is a prism through which we trace each ray, to find at last that all have united in the spotless beauty of His stainless life. Fidelity, constancy, purity, faith, love takes on new meaning in Him. What we are needing today is to see the divine glory in His face, to feel the spiritual glow of His Presence in the life. These Wise Men followed on until they came where the young child was. They found Him. Have you?"

STOCK OF ANTIQUES IS LOST AS $55,000 FIRE SWEEPS STUDIO

Valuable Paintings Burned in Twentieth Street Establishment.

OWNERS SAY INSURANCE WILL COVER FULL LOSS

Two-Alarm Blaze Slightly Damages Apartment on S Street.

Fire, said to have originated from a defective furnace flue, early yesterday morning destroyed the entire stock of the Schuyler & Lounsbury Antique Studio at 1409 Twentieth street northwest. Loss was estimated at $55,000.

The blaze was discovered about 10 a. m. and had gained rapid headway before fire apparatus could be summoned. The flames were confined to the interior of the three-story brick structure, although firemen found it difficult to fight the blaze, as it was impossible to extend hose into the building. It was nearly half an hour before the fire was brought under control.

Operated By Women.

The shop, dealing in valuable antiques, had been operating for about a year under the management of Miss Elanore Schuyler and Mrs. McCarty Lounsbury. Both women hastened to the scene when notified of the fire.

Efforts to save articles in the burning building were futile, as the intense heat forced firemen to fight the flames from a distance.

Antiques valued at thousands of dollars were destroyed. Among them was a Tishbein portrait painted in 1780, valued at $3,500; a painting by Sir Francis Cotes, valued at $3,000; a Louis XV writing desk, valued at $1,000, and a number of lamps and mirrors valued at $3,700. Loss was fully covered by insurance, the owners said.

Sagamore Apartment Damaged.

Slight damage was caused last night in a two-alarm fire of unknown origin in the Sagamore Apartments, at 1824 S street northwest.

The building, of brick structure, was occupied by four colored families. The fire broke out in the rear of the fourth floor. Because of the density of houses in the area, a second alarm was sounded.

The cast of the play, directed by John Dunnigan, includes Bernice Kilser, Eileen Dugan, Anna Mae Ryan, Margaret O'Connor, Helen Cuddy, Catherine Murphy, Bill Beach, Norman Simms, Francis McGarraghy, Pat Gaegan, Dominic Vammino and the director.

Knighthood of Youth To Repeat Play Today

Sir Gareth Circle of the Knighthood of Youth will repeat its presentation of "A Day Spent With King Arthur and His Knights" at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the John Quincy Adams School in the school auditorium at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon.

Parents of the children requested a repetition of the play. Mrs. Lucille Steiner Stebbins will address the meeting on "Education Through Reading." A children's library has been started by the association in the school.

L. A. Rover May Address Civic Group Tomorrow

Acceptance of an invitation to address the Blomingdale Civic Association by Leo A. Rover, district attorney, at Tabor Presbyterian Church Second and S streets northwest, tomorrow night, was indicated yesterday by Edward F. Harris, recently named by the Federation of Civic Associations to head a special committee on matters concerning the Police Department.

Dr. George H. Richardson, federation president, will install newly elected officers of the association: Mrs. J. A. Cuney, president; J. A. Logan, E. T. Hawkins, S. D. Matthews, vice presidents; Mrs. E. M. Matthews, recording secretary; E. F. Harris, corresponding secretary; E. W. Crump, treasurer; N. W. Weddington, sergeant at arms; R. A. Fairley, chaplain.

Man Held After Auto Crash.

Because he lost control of his automobile which struck a tree at Eleventh and F streets northeast early yesterday morning, Morton Galloway, 34 years old, of Twelfth street near F street northeast, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving after Casualty Hospital physicians had administered first aid for cuts and bruises.

Man Shot in Altercation; Alleged Assailant Held

Thomas A. Davis, colored, 36 years old, of 1328 Eighth street northwest, was shot and severely wounded by another colored man yesterday during an altercation in a house on Ninth street near T northwest.

Davis was taken to Garfield Hospital. A shot from a 32-caliber revolver had entered his chest above the heart. Dillard Clark, 32 years old, colored, his alleged assailant, is being held at the Eighth Precinct on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. Clark lives on Eighth street near S street northwest.

Baha'i Assembly Ends Conference

Teaching Methods Are Outlined and Permanent Committee Is Appointed.

Members of the Washington Baha'i Assembly, with delegates from Baltimore and Philadelphia, closed a two-day teaching conference last night with a public meeting at which Allen McDaniel told of the progress that is being made in building the Baha'i Temple on the shore of Lake Michigan at Wilmette, Ill. He said that the temple will be ready for occupancy next year.

The conference was held in the Edmonds Building. Methods of teaching the Baha'i cause were discussed and a permanent committee was appointed, with F. St. George Spendlove as chairman.

The conference was opened by Dr. Stabwood Cobb, of Washington. Delegates from Philadelphia were Miss Jessie Revell and Mrs. I. M. Huff. The Baltimore Baha'i Assembly was represented by Mrs. F. Woodward Ripsley. The conference was the first of a series that will be held during the winter.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

ELMER TWITCHELL AT ADDIS ABABA.

ADDIS ABABA, Abyssinia.—Well, I attended the coronation of Tafari Makonennen, the new Emperor of Abyssinia, and if the Ringling Brothers don't incorporate it in their grand opening pageant next summer they are missing a bet. It cost $3,000,000 to put it on, but if Tafari is smart he will get most of this back through the picture rights.

• • • •

I didn't know just what to wear, but finally wore a pair of gold embroidered golf trousers, a leopard skin vest, a double-breasted raccoon coat and a brown derby trimmed with paper flowers and stuffed woodpeckers. I carried a shield of buffalo hide and a gold-handled mashie-niblick. My gift to the emperor was a five-ton truckload of Goldman-Sachs warrants.

• • • •

Tafari rode to the coronation in an imperial coach that once belonged to Kaiser Wilhelm. He had it simonized and the dents taken out of the rear fenders.

• • • •

Everybody who was anybody in Abyssinia turned out and it looked like a group picture of all the strange peoples ever encountered by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson. Five thousand cattle were slaughtered on the spot for the big banquet served by the new emperor, which is a new world record for barbecues. It was the first high-class banquet I ever attended that did not open with oysters, and I think Tafari deserves credit for originality.

• • • •

THE coronation gifts were most impressive to me, although the emperor and empress will be a long time finding out what to do with some of them. President Hindenburg sent 500 quarts of Rhine wine, England sent a half-ton cake with nuts and the French sent an airplane. Mussolini sent a carload of green bananas. The big disappointment among the gifts was an autographed photo from President Hoover as the official gift of the United States. The Emperor of the Abyssinians didn't say anything, but you could tell from his expression that he had expected at least a couple of silk shirts and a dollar necktie.

• • • •

However, the emperor got a lot of gifts from private American citizens and firms. They included an electric icebox, a typewriter, a new kind of amaryllis bush, some bound copies of the National Geographic and the moving picture films of Ben-Hur, "With Byrd at the South Pole," the third period of the Yale-Dartmouth game, 1,800 feet of Clara Bow, a close-up of Al Smith and some fine views of Boulder Dam, the New Orleans Mardi Gras and the last White House fire.

• • • •

I don't know the significance of the National Geographic, but it may be that some dentist cleaned out his office and decided Abyssinia was a good place to send them.

• • • •

All in all, it was a swell party and should put Abyssinia on the map. At this writing, with all those gifts piled everywhere, it looks like a loading platform at a mail order firm's plant. Long live the Emperor of Abyssinia! And I hope the gift of an amaryllis bush will not be taken as any reflection on his present beard.

ELMER TWITCHELL.

NEW YORK ELECTION MOTHER GOOSE.

There was a young prober named Tuttle
Who exclaimed "How I'd like to know what'll
Put me safe on a train for an Albany reign!"
But he went for a ride in the shuttle.

Voice of the G. O. P.—"Who threw that?"

GENE TUNNEY, it is revealed, made two million dollars during his 4½ years as heavyweight champion. And they say there is no big money in sprinting!

President Hoover listened to the recent election returns on the radio. He probably has changed his mind about the radio being such a blessing.

There is a report that the Republican leaders are examining motion pictures of the election to see if it can't be protested on the ground of unnecessary roughness. Or piling on the runner.

There is no justification for fears that the new members of Senate and House will do anything radical inside of a year. It will take the members that long to get introduced to one another.

Boy, Arrested in Holdup, Begs Policemen for Food

Begging his captors for food after being arrested on charges of an attempt to rob a bakery, John Norris, 17 years old, of Second street northeast, near D, was taken to a restaurant and given a hearty meal before being locked up at the Sixth Precinct Station.

The boy told Detective Sergt. Larry O'Dea that he had eaten nothing for several days and was desperate when he thrust his hand into his pocket and commanded William E. Egoff, of 3933 Fourteenth street northwest, to hold up his hands.

In his weakened condition caused by hunger, the boy told the detective that he lost his nerve and fled from the store with a pan of rolls.

O'Dea said that Morris entered the bakery with a plea for something to eat. When the proprietor offered him the rolls the boy is alleged to have attempted the holdup.
